81st Year, No. 204

By Arthur Mayse

A Legislature refreshed by its weekend break opened with jollity and mirth on Monday, but by the time Attorney-General Bonner moved the 6 p.m. adjournment in the absence of Premier Bennett, the climate had cooled remarkably.

The premier quitted his big blue chair minutes after a clash with NDP Gordon Dowding, first member for Burnaby, who in as brisk a bit of opposition as we've witnessed so far this session, advanced with best fang foremost to slash at PGE operation and maintenance.

This assault, coming hard after Mr. Dowding's prediction that government takeover of B.C. Telephone Company would be launched within a year, fetched Mr. Bennett to his feet with arm flying like a pump handle.

"You're part of the problem," he accused lawyer Dowding, "not of the solution." Then, half-turned to address Speaker William Murray, but with eyes cast heavenward to the press gallery: "We know what you're doing!"

Inciting to unrest! Education Minister Leslie Peterson supplied; a charge followed by a cross-floor hollering match punctuated by whacks of the Speaker's gavel.

Through this exchange, and most of his further few minutes in the House, Mr. Bennett assumed a familiar pose denoting disdainful unconcern . . . back turned on Mr. Dowding while he chatted amiably with Mr. Peterson.

A gauge of present towering strength was to be found in North Vancouver Liberal Gordon Gibson's apparent inability to land a blow.

We who observe the deliberations of the House know Mr. Gibson as a shrewd, ruthless bull-of-the-woods who feints with a homespun jest or two, then plants a caulk-studded logger's boot in the government belly.

Not so on Monday!

We were taken on a Gibsonian excursion to Barkerville, where a barkeep in a resurrected saloon affronted the ghosts of long-gone miners by decanting a glass of cola instead of the double rye Mr. Gibson had ordered.

We enjoyed a pleasant Feb. ruary phantasy of mass winter excursions by British Columbians to a province-sponsored Hawaiian resort, with government picking up the tab.

All this made zesty listening; but where was the punch of yester-year, the clang clang stroke we waited for?

It didn't come. Liberal Gibson lumbered on, while a smiling premier nodded encouragement, to a tame end.

This was no double rye but lukewarm cola. John Tisdale struck harder against Sacred Sins of omission, and he's on the government side!

One suggestion which interested me particularly was that B.C. no longer look to Ottawa for protection of her salmon from Japanese deepsea fleets. Instead, Mr. Tisdale urged establishment of an effective provincial fisheries authority.

A windup observation, I think that if afternoon speeches aren't to be curtailed, the docket should be reduced by one. Monday's last slated debater, Charles MacSorley, SC for Burnaby, was forced to pop his remarks back in the warmer until today.

Mystery Shrouds Pre-Summit Meet

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Conservative national president Dalton K. Camp met today with opposition leader John Diefenbaker to discuss the weekend meeting of the party executive.

After talking for one and a half hours, Mr. Camp and Mr. Diefenbaker had lunch in the privacy of the latter's office.

All morning an aura of mystery and tension pervaded the fourth floor offices of the opposition leader on Parliament Hill. It was apparent from comments made both by Diefen-

Gignac Plea 'Not Guilty' To Perjury

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Gignac, 35, pleaded not guilty today to a charge that he perjured himself while giving testimony before the Dorion judicial inquiry.

Judge René Theberge set Feb. 9 as the date for preliminary hearing.

The five-count charge alleges that at Gignac, a businessman friend of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Rivard, perjured himself in testifying about a deposit of $60,000 made at a Montreal trust company June 25, 1964. He is also charged with capital murder in the Sept. 17 gangland slaying here of Rocky Brunette, a night club doorman.

The Dorion inquiry, which resumes in Ottawa Feb. 9, is investigating allegations that a federal official offered a $20,000 bribe to a lawyer representing the United States government in an extradition case involving Rivard.

When Diefenbaker announced that such a meeting must be held to decide on a leadership convention before the session resumes Feb. 16. If no convention date is set the 10 will meet again to assess their position.

Balcer himself has made it clear that he does not feel he can continue to sit as a Conservative as long as Diefenbaker remains leader of the party.

Chief Justice Frederic Dorian, head of the inquiry, said Friday he was forwarding information on Gignac's testimony to the Quebec attorney-general for possible perjury action against the witness.

Gignac testified the $60,000 was deposited jointly by Mrs. Rivard and himself at a trust company office. He said Mrs. Rivard had some money and borrowed more to establish the fund, to be used for her husband's bail.

During the four-minute ceremony at the monument the royal couple stood with heads bowed as a military band played the Ethiopian and British national anthems.

After the ceremony the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh visited Trinity Cathedral and walked down the 18 marble steps leading to the cathedral vault, where they placed a wreath on the tomb of Empress Menen. The empress, wife of Emperor Haile Selassie, died in February, 1963.

Today's program for the royal visitors included a visit to a school, where the Queen accepted a painting by a 15-year-old boy depicting the British Royal Family.

The Queen and the Duke also visited the Princess Tschai-

Hospital where Ethiopian nurses are trained. They later visited the Halle Selassie University.

The heavy round of engagements today followed the royal couple's arrival in Addis Ababa Monday for an eight-day state visit in return for a visit to Britain by the Ethiopian emperor in October, 1954.

The emperor, who was

Britain's guest during the Italian occupation of his country, was at the airport to greet the Queen when she arrived from London.

Resident in navy-blue uniform with gold braid and a hat plumed with lion's mane, he boarded the jet liner with the British ambassador.

When the Queen stepped out in a pink and white dress and hat and a canary yellow coat, there was a gasp of admiration from the crowd.

Two Ethiopian girls handed her a huge bouquet. The emperor introduced members of the imperial family.

A guard of honor saluted.

On the Queen's drive into the city thousands of cheering people lined the road five deep on both sides for five miles.

Guess the groundhog didn't come out. Didn't feel much like it m'self.

Thet royal reception outdid one in another country.

Let's hope that actuary ain't a visionary.

Troops Mount Machine Guns In Laos Capital

Dissident Leader Rejects Ultimatum

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuters) — Laotian military forces armed with machine-guns took up positions in the centre of Vientiane today as the leader of an attempted military coup refused to disperse his troops.

Col. Bouleut Sykoy, who led three companies of Laotian soldiers in an attempt to seize control of the capital Sunday night, today defied an ultimatum by Laotian military leaders to withdraw his troops from the city.

The ultimatum expired at 1 p.m. despite efforts by U.S. and British military attaches to persuade Bouleut to abide by an agreement reached in talks held at the residence of Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma Monday.

Bouleut maintained he could not withdraw his troops from the city until pressure from the military chiefs ceased.

Asked what he was going to do, he replied: "Nothing. Wait until the pressure is off."

WANTS GUARANTEE

Diplomatic sources said Bouleut wanted a guarantee of his own safety and that of his troops.

Before the ultimatum expired, troops outside the sport stadium where Bouleut has his headquarters manned heavy machine-guns.

Bouleut, whose troops were holding out at Wattay Airport, charged that Gen. Kouprashit Abhay, military commander of Vientiane, broke an agreement to allow the rebel forces to withdraw to the stadium headquarters.

The coup, which was regarded as being directed at the army rather than the government, was reported to have fizzled out 15 hours after it started Sunday.

Those taken into custody yesterday were charged with contempt of court for demonstrating outside the Dallas County courthouse while court was in session.

SIGNS ORDERS

Circuit Court Judge James Hare signed the orders under which the group was taken into custody.

About 30 demonstrators charged with contempt Monday were sentenced to five days at hard labor and handed $50 fines today by Judge Hare.

Those arrested today walked to the courthouse in small groups to avoid breaking the city's anti-parade law.

All those taken into custody were adults. They were loaded into yellow buses and were hauled away singing "Freedom" songs.

About 500 students, who boycotted schools for the second consecutive day, were poised for more demonstrations.

King's comments from his jail cell were relayed by Rev. Andrew Yotrg, one of his aides.

He said his only aim was to make the position of the army stronger.

WIRE BRIEFS

Khrushchev Missing From Kozlov Funeral

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union's top leaders today attended the state funeral of former deputy premier Frol Kozlov but the man who raised him to power, former premier Nikita Khrushchev, seemed conspicuously absent.

Wilson Still Plans Visit to Canada, U.S.

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson plans to visit Washington and Ottawa later this month even if the United Nations General Assembly session is adjourned, well-informed sources said here today.

Anti-De Gaulle Outburst at Veygand Rites

PARIS (UPI) — Thousands of demonstrators shouting "Down with De Gaulle" today turned Gen. Maxime Veygand's funeral into the most unruly anti-government outburst since the Algerian crisis of 1962.

OTTAWA (CP) — W. R. Joyce, a Toronto actuary who is chairman of the social security committee of the Canadian Association of Actuaries, blasted the proposed Canada Pension Plan today with a warning that it could cause trouble in the years ahead.

It is "folly" to introduce a plan which inherently contains the seeds of discontent, he said in a brief to the joint parliamentary committee studying the Canada Pension Plan.

The public is quick to sense injustice and will not tolerate obvious subsidies, unmerited either by social need or by personal contribution."

Douglas-Horne, the Conservative party leader, recalled the Labor pledge of 100 days of dynamic action and declared: "The dynamism of which the prime minister spoke has been the dynamism of the bulk in the china shop."

He read out the Conservative's censure motion to be voted on tonight. It deplored "the hasty and ill-considered actions of the government during their first 100 days in office" and proclaimed "no confidence" in Labor's ability.

Mr. Joyce's brief said the benefit structure of the plan is poorly designed to meet the social needs in Canada. It provides benefits in reverse relationship to the social needs.

The beneficiaries under the CPP are today's high wage earners. The persons who need assistance most are those aged whose working years were in the low-wage era.

"It is inconceivable that any responsible government should introduce the Canada Pension Plan without first obtaining factual information on the actual incomes by age-group for various regions of the country."

"I urge the committee to recommend that this important information be produced and studied before the government should proceed with so costly, complex and irrevocable a measure as the Canada Pension Plan."

Highway crews were beginning today clearing Oregon near Tillamook. The highway was in the path of the earth slide that dammed the Wilson River Sunday forcing 600 persons downriver to the sea to evacuate.

Most major highways in the state were open, although U.S. 101 on the coast was blocked by slides at several points.

TWO WASHOUTS

Union Pacific restored service Monday in eastern Oregon near Pendleton after 300 men, working since last Friday, made repairs at two washouts. Southern Pacific, stopped for a time, was also back in service.

The weather bureau forecasts continued cool temperatures for the state with clear skies in most areas. The combination of warm temperatures and heavy rain was blamed for last week's floods.

Transportation in the state was gradually being restored to near normal as railroads and highway crews worked around the clock.

Russia Tests New Rocket

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union announced today the successful completion of new multi-stage rocket tests which may affect this year's space launch program.

Tass News Agency said a new version of rocket carrier for space objects was launched in the Soviet Union and came down more than 13,000 kilometres (8,000 miles) away in the Pacific with a high degree of accuracy.

Striking Longshoremen Ignore LBJ's Plea to Return to Jobs

NEW YORK (AP) — Top officials of the striking longshoremen's union have declined to comply immediately with President Johnson's request that the men return to work in the ports from Maine to Texas where contract settlements have been reached.

Johnson, who relayed his request through Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz, also urged early settlements in the other ports.

The situation in Philadelphia, where negotiations resume to-day after an overnight recess, has been named as a major factor in charting the union's course.

Assistant labor secretary James J. Reynolds conferred here Monday about the president's request with leaders of the 60,000-member AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association.

Reynolds, with ILA president Thomas W. Gleason at his side, later told reporters that union officials would make no decision on the White House request until it was certain that ILA locals in Baltimore and Philadelphia had accepted contract terms.

APPROVED CONTRACT

A short time later, word came that 4,000 ILA members in Baltimore had approved a four-year contract by a vote of 1,879 to 468. The contract is a revision of the one defeated last Wednesday 1,371 to 1,016.

For many years, the ILA has had a policy of not allowing its men to work in any port until locals in all ports reached agreements.

In addition to Baltimore, the ports where the ILA has reached agreements with the shipping and stevedoring companies include New York, New Orleans, Boston, Norfolk, Va.; Baton Rouge, La., and Mobile, Alabama.

In addition to Philadelphia, the major unsettled areas are Galveston, Tex.; Miami, Fla., and Hampton Roads, Va.

RC Teachers Continue Walkout

QUEBEC (CP) — Fourteen suburban Roman Catholic school commissioners hit by a teachers' walkout demanded today that the teachers end their "irregular" tactics and return to work immediately.

The demand came as some 550 teachers headed into their second day of "study sessions" which have closed schools in the surrounding district and left 15,000 French-speaking students on wet nursing the horse halfway round the world.

"We'll be glad to see him go ashore—for his own sake," said McCrory.

Percy eventually will get to his new home, Delvin Miller's Meadowland Farm, near Pittsburgh. But for the time being, at least, he is a horse without a country.

(Times News Services)

BOSTON—Percy Tarport is a race horse but he probably feels more like a sea horse.

The bay stallion, a three-year-old trotter, was hoisted aboard a British freighter at Sydney, Australia, last Dec. 2 for shipment to the United States.

The ship, the SS City of Brisbane, put in at several U.S. ports but Percy Tarport could not be unloaded because of the longshoremen's strike.

A veterinarian boarded the ship at Norfolk, Va., and gave Percy blood tests. When the freighter arrived here Jan. 10, Percy was examined by U.S. agriculture department inspectors and veterinarians.

But Percy remained shipbound because the port was strike-bound.

Then the freighter sailed for Halifax, N.S., to unload 800 tons of frozen meat. Percy made the trip. He had no choice. Two deck officers, Laurence McCrory, 19, Belfast, Ireland, and Adrian Luckett, 17, of Norwich, Eng., were assigned the chore of wet nursing the horse halfway round the world.

"We'll be glad to see him go ashore—for his own sake," said McCrory.

Percy eventually will get to his new home, Delvin Miller's Meadowland Farm, near Pittsburgh. But for the time being, at least, he is a horse without a country.

NEW YORK—Like any dutiful daughter, Linda Hope springs eternally to the defense of her globe-girdling, golf-addicted father, Bob Hope.

But in true Hope tradition, she never lets sentiment stand in the way of quip.

For instance: "He's now busy working on a TV show and trying to give time to his true profession, golf. He hates to let work interfere with golf, you know."

Not long ago, she accepted for her father a Foreign Press Association scroll for the best television comedy series, and said: "... I'm one of Dad's biggest fans—especially on TV. It's one of the few times I get to see him in the house... This is one father a daughter can really look up to. He's always flying."

Tall and slim, with hazel eyes and short dark blonde hair she combs back severely, 25-year-old Linda looks like a clean-cut, well-scrubbed, tweedy English girl. She is the oldest of the four Hope children—all adopted when they were a few weeks old.

"If I had any trouble adjusting, I was too young to know," she said in an interview.

Life with father, she explains, is never dull.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Yale students have won a fight for daily visiting privileges for women.

Students now may have women visitors in their college rooms seven days a week instead of only on the weekends.

LONDON—Two performances scheduled by American pop singer P. J. Proby, whose pants split on stage again Sunday night, have been cancelled by his British promoters.

The curtain was lowered on Proby Sunday when his pants came apart at the seams during a performance in Luton, north of London.

Proby's pants popped Saturday night and the night before that during performances in South London.

He denied it was a stunt.

"Are you out of your mind? This incident could easily kill my career."

Proby's manager said a chain of movie theatres has decided to bar the performer and that various theatre owners were considering a similar move.

Proby suggested that henceforth his costumes be made of plastic.

TORONTO—Elmer Sophia (Liberal—Sudbury) said in the legislature Monday the CBC television late night news suffers in authenticity because its announcer also does toothpaste commercials on TV.

"I'm one of those who have looked with some disfavor on Earl Cameron selling toothpaste on the CBC," Mr. Sophia commented.

He said Mr. Cameron was required to "tell lies" about the particular brand of toothpaste, and this "detracts from the authenticity of the 11 o'clock news."

B.C. TOTAL SECOND HIGHEST IN SIGNING CHURCHILL BOOK

OTTAWA (CP)—Close to 33,000 Canadians have signed books of remembrance for Sir Winston Churchill in various centres across Canada.

Toronto was the city with the most names registered, 7,177 according to figures supplied by British government offices. A book that alternated between Vancouver and Victoria was next with "more than 5,000."

Congo Election Dates Announced

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP)—Congolese national elections will be held from March 18 to April 3, the government announced today.

A government communiqué said voting would take place at intervals in the six weeks' period in the various provinces to allow electoral commissions to visit the localities.

Rifle Held At Head Of Victims

Pathologist Testifies At Non-Capital Trial

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—A pathologist testified Monday the bullets that killed three Surrey youths as they camped beside a lake north of Mission were fired with the rifle muzzle in contact with their heads.

Dr. J. C. Coady, testifying at the non-capital murder trial of Dalton Grey, 24, of Surrey, said the remainder of the shots were fired from a distance.

The letter said staff investigators were checking into a number of labor union welfare-pension funds whose wage-earning employee members "rarely receive any benefits or annuities" but whose administrators do profit.

UNION FUNDS TO BE PROBED BY SENATORS

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Senate investigation sub-committee said today it is looking into huge union welfare pension funds which rarely pay any benefits and the suspected role of racketeers in the failure of some federally-insured banks.

Its plans for hearings on these and other matters were disclosed in a letter from chairman John L. McClellan (Dem., Ark.) to the Senate rules committee asking approval of a $435,000 budget for the year ahead.

The letter said staff investigators were checking into a number of labor union welfare-pension funds whose wage-earning employee members "rarely receive any benefits or annuities" but whose administrators do profit.

DIEFENBAKER

last Thursday that he had set a date for a parliamentary caucus a scant four days before the House resumes, some recalcitrant Tories feared their chances for a real confrontation on the leadership might be lost as they were before the defeat of the Tory government two years ago.

RALLIED CAUCUS

At that time, Diefenbaker eloquently backed by Alvin Hamilton and Senator Grattan O'Leary, rallied the caucus enthusiastically to squelch the attempted palace revolt led by then Trade Minister Georges Hees.

Although several Tory members, other than the Quebec Group, have now spoken out for a leadership convention, it is generally agreed that Diefenbaker has the majority of his members behind him, particularly those from the west.

Bundy, top White House foreign policy adviser, leaves today and will return sometime next weekend.

A White House announcement late Monday on Bundy's trip followed a high level meeting held by Johnson.

In sending Bundy to Saigon, Johnson is understood to want a detailed, first-hand report on the prospects for developing political stability in the South Vietnamese government which only last week suffered another in a long series of overthrows.

Bundy also may discuss with Taylor whether his own ability to carry out U.S. policy has been impaired by his disputes with Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Khanh, South Vietnamese strongman who engineered last week's coup. The White House and state department have declared Johnson's "full confidence" in Taylor and his intention to keep Taylor in Saigon.

One source suggested that a final attempt might be made on the weekend to gather a select committee of the executive together to try to persuade Diefenbaker he should resign, and thus avoid an open and bitter confrontation.

Whatever the results, Camp himself has not publicly written off Diefenbaker as the man for the job at this time.

On a weekend television program he said he "wouldn't bet against" a Diefenbaker win if an election were called tomorrow.

ANNUAL CHALLENGE

The weekend showdown is taking on the characteristics of an annual challenge to the Tory leader.

In the first week of February, 1963, Douglas Harkness resigned as defence minister in the Diefenbaker cabinet; the government was defeated, an election was called, and Hees and Pierre Sevigny resigned their portfolios following a party caucus.

Hartono said last November that Indonesia would explode an atomic bomb in 1965 and that it had begun surveying the possibility of producing intercontinental ballistic missiles. His statements last year came shortly after a reported successful launching of Indonesian-made rockets for artillery and infantry use.

Indonesia has an atomic reactor in Bandung, West Java, which was obtained from the United States. Another reactor is under construction with Soviet aid at Serpong, 44 miles southwest of Jakarta. Both reactors were said to be for peaceful purposes.

DISCUSS REPORT

There was no immediate reaction from the teachers. But a spokesman said the "study sessions" would continue today to discuss the report of the Parent royal commission on education.

The teachers called the "study sessions"—their way of getting around the fact they can't legally strike—in a bid to force their salary dispute with the commissions to a showdown.

The teachers claim a November arbitration board report, recommending their salaries be increased to parity with Quebec City levels, is binding on both sides and must be implemented. The commissions, on the other hand, are contesting the arbitration board findings in superior court.

A spokesman for the commissions said following a closed-door meeting Monday night, that should the teachers refuse to return to their classrooms, the commissions reserve the right to take all steps open to them under the law. These steps were said to include cancellation of individual teaching contracts or general decertification of the teachers' syndicates.

JUDGE SWEARS IN

VANCOUVER (CP)—James Allen Macdonald, whose father was once chief justice of the B.C. Court of Appeal, was sworn in Monday as a judge of the county court. He was welcomed by the bench by representatives of the Vancouver Bar Association, the B.C. Law Society and the Canadian Bar Association.

More than 200,000 English and French-speaking students would be affected by a school shutdown in the Montreal area.

A spokesman for the Quebec suburban commissions said they feel the use of "study sessions" creates a false impression among the public by disguising an illegal act.

These acts were prohibited by law, he said, and condemned by all.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains a Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "itching piles". It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids.

This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained over a period of months! Among these sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions—even cases of long standing.

This was accomplished by a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

convention in Winnipeg, adopted the Ensign as the legion's official flag. On this basis, "it is perfectly lawful" to continue flying the Ensign on Legion buildings, "and in fact any structure other than Dominion buildings and headquarters."

Fred O'Breath, in a signed editorial in The Legionary, national magazine of the Royal Canadian Legion, says the veterans' body spearheaded the fight to retain the Ensign as Canada's national flag, but Parliament decided otherwise and the Queen has approved the new flag.

In a few short weeks, the Canadian Red Ensign will be hauled down and the new flag hoisted on dominion government buildings and installations everywhere.

"It will be a day of poignant sadness for many loyal Canadians who sincerely love the Ensign. But as loyal and law-abiding Canadians they will accept and respect the new emblem which their Parliament and sovereign have proclaimed as the national flag of Canada."

'NATIONAL UNITY, INDEPENDENCE AND ECONOMIC SELF RULE'

NDP Leader States 'Articles of Faith'

By JIM HUME

Tommy Douglas bounced into Victoria Monday with a gleam in his eye, the scent of an election in his nostrils and a new creed for Canadians.

The national leader of the New Democratic Party has already forecast a general election in June.

When he addressed 250 members of the Victoria Men's Canadian Club at the Empress Hotel he left no doubt that he was ready for the fray.

Mr. Douglas did not give a political address. But following the meeting he admitted that the next election would probably be fought on the issues he mentioned.

Stressed National Unity

National unity, Canada's independence from the United States and the return of economic power to Canadians, were the three points he stressed.

Premier Bennett Makes Tommy Douglas Welcome

Premier Bennett led the desk-thumping applause Monday when national leader of the NDP party, T. C. Douglas, sat as a guest in the B.C. Legislature.

Mr. Bennett then rose and welcomed Mr. Douglas to the legislature and later walked across the floor to chat with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas while they sat behind the NDP benches.

NDP Member Claims

Bennett Eyeing B.C. Telephone

The provincial government is planning to take over B.C. Telephone Company "within the year," Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby) said Monday in the legislature.

He said the government back-benchers did not know that the B.C. Electric was to be taken over "and they don't know this government is projecting this takeover within the year," he said.

"I have pretty good sources for that information and the premier knows it," Mr. Dowding said.

He would not divulge his source but outside of the legislature he told reporters it came from someone close to "the eminence behind this government—the man who controls [it] thinking."

Asked if he meant premier's financial braintrust Einar Gunderson, Mr. Dowding said he would not say anymore than he had.

TWO METHODS

He also said there were two ways in which the provincial government could take control of the company despite its federal charter.

It could try to buy up the common stock of the company—currently evaluated at about $153 million—or it could expropriate the physical plant of the com-

PETITION ASKS SALES TAX EXEMPTIONS

A petition of almost 10,000 signatures asking sales tax exemptions to student clothing and certain household items was tabled in the legislature Monday by Mrs. Lois Hagen (NDP—Grand Forks-Greenwood).

She said in her argument that the present size limits on children's clothing exemptions were unrealistic and a hardship to larger families.

The petition was circulated by the Women Against High Prices Committee which recently lobbied MLAs for the exemptions.

Purify Our Sewage Urges Saanich MLA

Wider use of sewage treatment plants for residential subdivisions was strongly urged in the legislature Monday by John Tisdale (SC-Saanich).

Mr. Tisdale said the government should investigate successes with a fully-enclosed system used in some places such as the Arctic in which domestic water is purified and re-used many times.

Mr. Tisdale also said the official ban on discharge of treated effluent from more common sewage treatment plants into streams such as Colquitz Creek should be reviewed.

"I noticed (last summer) that the whole of Colquitz Creek had been turned into a slimy green mess and it smells pretty strong."

FLUSH CREEK

Mr. Tisdale said discharging treated effluent "would at least help to flush (Colquitz Creek) out."

Mr. Tisdale criticized the provincial highways department for failing to start reconstruction of the north end of Patricia Bay Highway immediately while awaiting results of a traffic survey.

He said the traffic problems created "on this one-way street with two lanes" resulted from the government ferry service so the government should widen it to four lanes.

The provincial government has created these problems and it should be prepared to move

For good measure he recited his new "articles of faith" for Canadians composed in a "few spare minutes" last Saturday in his Burnaby home.

"I believe in Canada."

"I have faith in its future and am dedicated to its destiny."

"I believe that this country has the potential for greatness, not only in material terms, but also in the things of the mind and spirit."

"I believe that the ingenuity of our minds and the labor of our hands applied to our vast resources can give Canada a standard of living and a quality of life far beyond our fondest dreams."

"I believe that the only thing we need to doubt is doubt itself. With faith in ourselves and a sense of national purpose we can unite all Canadians—labor and industry, farmer and city dweller, Catholic and Protestant, Gentile and Jew, French speaking and English—in a great crusade to make Canada a land where the good things of life will be enjoyed by all."

Sing O Canada With Pride

"I believe that a prosperous Canada can be a mighty force for peace in a troubled world. We seek no military conquest or territorial aggrandizement. Instead we shall use the many gifts Providence has bestowed to help nations less fortunate than ourselves and to wage constant war against poverty, ignorance and disease the world around."

"I believe that if we accept this article of faith and put it into practice, the day will surely come when our children and our children's children will sing, with pride 'O Canada, . . . with glowing hearts we see thee rise the true north, strong and free . . .'"

Mr. Douglas recited his new creed for Canadians at the end of a 30-minute speech devoted entirely to the theme of national unity and the acceptance of French and British cultures.

"Canada was born in defiance of geography and economics," Mr. Douglas said. "We built a nation against all the laws."

Mr. Douglas stressed that the early nation of Canada was formed when the Empire Loyalists fled from the United States and settled in Upper Canada.

"They quickly joined hands with the French-Canadians of lower Canada," he added. "At that time they had nothing else in common but a desire to retain their identity. It may be that a similar alliance will serve us again."

The Socialist leader said there was no doubt in his mind that "a nation so conceived could survive, retaining the traditions and culture and background of the British and French instead of being absorbed in the melting-pot process."

We Have Many Assets to Offer

"We have many intangible assets to offer," he said. "The contributions of bilingualism and biculturalism are distinctive. There may be something to be said for the melting pot which destroys old cultures and places everyone in a common mould."

"But there is also something to be said for keeping the cultures we have," he added. "We shall be richer for the diversification."

Mr. Douglas said he had no illusions about the difficulties facing Canada in the future.

"Divisiveness can be troublesome," he said. "Trying to build (on it) can be difficult. But if we succeed we will build a rich heritage and make a contribution to world culture much better than the melting-pot."

Mr. Douglas said he disagreed with those who felt that the only future Canada had was in amalgamation with the United States.

"They have many things to be admired in the United States," he told the intent audience. "But so have we. A system of democratic government with great flexibility where any citizen, regardless of color or creed can seek public office; a concept of justice and freedom from Britain and France well worth preserving. We have never had a McCarthy era in Canada . . . it is impossible and always will be while we have freedom . . . of press and pulpit."

Canada's independence in foreign affairs enabled the Dominion to make a greater contribution on the world scene that could be made if "we were part of the United States" Mr. Douglas said.

We Thought Cuba Trade Right

"We have traded with Cuba and with Red China, not just to make money, but because we thought it was right to do so," he stated, and went on to say: "It has been a good thing for the United States to have us so."

Mr. Douglas said it was also a good thing for the United States to "have a friendly neighbor, but not a subservient neighbor. A helpful neighbor, but not a satellite."

On more tangible issues the leader of the NDP claimed that it was an illusion held by many that union with the United States would bring instant prosperity.

"There is an illusion that if we joined the U.S., all of us would be rich and all our cities would suddenly become like New York," he said.

"We should remember that the United States already has a vast industrial heartland," he reminded the listeners. "And that the U.S. has never believed in a planned economy."

"Look at Dakota and the southern states . . . their main function is to supply men and materials to the great heartland. (In those states) we see declining manpower and declining resources."

"If we joined the United States they would not rush in to Canada to build great factories, they already have their industrial complex. We would become just suppliers of raw materials."

"After all why should they maintain the auto-

Rotary Scheme Given the Nod By Foresters

The provincial forestry department may donate hundreds of trees for beautification of Patricia Bay Highway as a service clubs' project.

Government officials have indicated interest in the project proposed by the Victoria Rotary Club.

Once the route of the new four-lane highway is disclosed, the club has suggested the highway department section off the 20-mile distance into 40 segments.

Beautification of each segment would be undertaken by individual service clubs and other community groups, involving planting of trees and maintaining a lawn.

mobile industry at Windsor when just across the river are the great factories of Detroit able to supply all the needs of the nation."

Mr. Douglas said that already Canada shipped too many raw materials to the United States when "we should be shipping out processed products."

"The real future of Canada does not lie in becoming a periphery state with maybe 10 or 12 seats in Congress," he said. "Our future lies in developing our own industries and manufacturing our own goods."

Greater Exchange of Goods

Stressing that he was not advocating isolationism, Mr. Douglas said: "On the contrary I am advocating a greater exchange of goods. The real test is the crisis of power. We must keep the right to make our own economic decisions, to develop our new resources, to develop new products made in Canada by Canadians."

Mr. Douglas said he accepted and recognized the targets set for Canada in the recent study made by the Canadian Economic Council.

- The creation of 1,500,000 new jobs for Canadians.
- An increase of 5½ per cent in the gross national product.
- The reduction of the ranks of the unemployed to 3 per cent of the labor force.

He said he was confident that these objectives could be reached if Canadians "had faith" in the future of their country and "dedicated their lives to its destiny."

B.C. MEDICARE 'BOGUS, PHONY'

Douglas Denounces Bennett Plan

Alberta and Ontario have already sold a bill of goods on their medicare schemes and British Columbia is ready to swallow the same line.

Tommy Douglas, a national leader of the NDP, told 400 people at a special banquet Monday night that "these beggar-bowl schemes are just designed to stop comprehensive medicare so that we will never get the real thing."

Warming to his subject he stated that the insurance companies had fought for two years to prevent the Canadian pension plan.

"It would appear that they have now lost that battle," he said. "But they have now turned to more subtle ways to stop comprehensive, government-run medical care plans."

"If they were first steps I wouldn't mind," he said. "But if they were indeed first steps they would be granting free berta medical plan as degrading and humiliating."

"Just a few days ago in a speech at Winnipeg Mr. Justice Hall said rather significantly that the people who recommend bogus, phony plans designed to forestall comprehensive medicare so that we will never get the real thing."

TWO-YEAR FIGHT

Warming to his subject he stated that the insurance companies had fought for two years to prevent the Canadian pension plan.

"It would appear that they have now lost that battle," he said. "But they have now turned to more subtle ways to stop comprehensive, government-run medical care plans."

ALBERTA PLAN

Mr. Douglas noted that the Hall Commission on medical services had condemned the Alberta plan as degrading and humiliating.

"Already automation is displacing 4,000 workers a month in this country," he said. "We have to give serious study to the problem and find a solution."

SOME METHODS

Mr. Douglas suggested some methods he would adopt if his party ever forms the Canadian government:

- Raise the exemption level for the family man paying income tax.
- Lower the pension age to 65 without means test and raise pensions to $100 a month.

"This would mean that people who now cannot afford to buy things would become consumers," he said. "And that is what this country needs, more consumers. With more money spent on consumer goods more people would be employed producing those goods."

Mr. Douglas said he would also like to see instituted a move to get Canadian saving invested in developing industry and resources so that "we could eventually buy back control of the Canadian economy."

SACRIFICE SALE

DRABIT DISCOUNTS TELMAC NO MONEY DOWN

It's so big every pyramid in Egypt could be put in a pocket of it—it's just stupendous."

HONOR PREMIER

He said either the dam or the lake it will create should be named after Premier Bennett.

Referring to the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, he said:

"It's very well run and it is getting better each year. If I or any member knocked it at some time, our imagination was not good enough . . . whether it is making money or not is not the issue because it is bringing prosperity to B.C."

"We have a very fine minister but he needs more help. These other men he's dealing with have had far more experience in how to make a buck . . . and they're winning the game."

In other portions of his speech—which Mr. Gibson himself said sounded like a government back-bencher currying favor in the hopes of obtaining a cabinet post—he said he had travelled through the province visiting the Peace and Columbia River power sites.

"I want everyone in B.C. to know that the Portage Mountain Dam on the Peace is a monument to this government and especially a great monument to the premier because he

"It could run north during six months" was the driving force behind it.

The Canadian Identity

MR. T. C. DOUGLAS HAS DELIVERED his Canadian credo. It is a statement of belief that will appeal widely to people of this country, regardless of party or creed.

He declares his faith in the nation and its future. Its potentials can be realized not only in material achievement but in things of the mind and spirit. Canada, he is convinced, can develop in a way to help less fortunate countries, as well as all its own people. And it has nothing to doubt but doubt.

The leader of the New Democratic Party has given his answer to those who see an inevitable merging of Canada into the United States. Interdependence he accepts, co-operation and close ties between good neighbors—but not submergence of the Canadian identity.

The nation of Canada sprang, he notes, from two peoples, French-speaking and English-speaking, who joined to preserve their own cultures. As they made a success of this marriage, so too can Canadians of different points of view unite now, sharing the good things of life among them, respecting one another's traditions and beliefs and coming to bring greatness to the country.

It is important that this view should be heard throughout the country. At this time in our history we are threatened with rifts between the two original peoples, French-speaking and English-speaking, who laid the foundation of Canada. We are subjected to heavy pressures to conform to the outlook and way of life of our powerful and friendly neighbor—pressures which stem from economic considerations and are made the more pervasive by the constant flow of American culture across the border.

Mr. Douglas recognizes these influences. Appreciating their potency, he reminds Canadians that they will retain their identity only by keeping their attention on the Canadian character and strengthening that character in their daily living. If they don't, they can be absorbed, becoming sources of raw materials and manpower funneled into the American industrial complex. In the melting pot they will lose that strength and originality that stems from the individuality of their varied peoples.

It seems evident that this is the philosophy Mr. Douglas will carry to the country during the next election, which he expects in June.

He must be aware, of course, that the credo he has set forth is not the sole and exclusive property of the political party he leads. If he chooses to make it appear so, his effort will be recognized as an understandable appeal to the voting public.

Divorced from politics, the address by Mr. Douglas in Victoria earns high respect and commendation. What he said—the ideals to which he pointed—may not be new. They merit repetition, particularly at this time when, as he noted, Canadian life is undergoing change, is highly malleable and may now be setting the form that will endure.

But all these came from sophisticated Europe, and the high-tide of immigration from these regions is over. After Israel's independence Jews came over from Yemen and it was their turn to experience the difficulties of adjustment. They were soon followed by waves of immigrants from under-developed Asian and African regions, including Muslim and Arab States. Now half of Israel's immigrants—which means one-third of the total population—are newcomers from the Orient.

ISRAEL, whose people have suffered restrictions for centuries in other lands, now face the ironic danger of creating a permanently under-privileged class in their own country.

After 17 years of sovereignty Israel differs little in some respects from any older-established states. There are poor Israelis living in miserable huts as well as rich Israelis enjoying life in spacious villas. Israel has embittered illiterates as well as a professional aristocracy as highly skilled as any in the Western world.

But two-thirds of Israel's 2,500,000 people are immigrants. Almost invariably the most recent wave of newcomers feel themselves neglected and accepted with reluctance by the ruling majority.

In the early twenties, Jews coming from Poland felt themselves to be second-class members of Palestine's Jewish community in comparison with earlier arrivals from Russia, who were then established in homes and work and positions of political influence. Then, during the thirties, and especially after the advent of Hitler, the same sense of being unwelcome fell upon the immigrants arriving in flight from Germany. And when the Second World War was over it was the turn of the Rumanian and Hungarian Jews, most of them survivors of the Nazi death camps, to inherit the sense of being second-class citizens.

But all these came from sophisticated Europe, and the high-tide of immigration from these regions is over. After Israel's independence Jews came over from Yemen and it was their turn to experience the difficulties of adjustment. They were soon followed by waves of immigrants from under-developed Asian and African regions, including Muslim and Arab States. Now half of Israel's immigrants—which means one-third of the total population—are newcomers from the Orient.

Material Progress

Israel's 17 years of experience of absorbing new immigrants have shown that the material side of raising the standards of new groups is the easiest part. Through industrial growth, high taxation, contributions from Jewish organizations abroad and local skill in organizations, substantial progress has been made in improving the living standards of new settlers.

The greater problem stems from the tremendous educational gap between communities of different origin. A recent statistical survey has revealed that while only 3 per cent of immigrants hailing from Europe and America are literate, 33 per cent of those from Africa and Asia did not finish elementary school in their countries of origin.

At first it was thought and hoped that compulsory education from the age of six to 14 would correct this imbalance. But it was soon found that home conditions worked against this solution. The Oriental Jews breed more rapidly than Jews of European origin. Children of large families live in overcrowded homes and miss the peace and quietness needed for concentration on their lessons. The results of this emerged in statistics. Seventy-one per cent of the children of parents of European or American origin have post elementary schooling, but only 43 per cent of those from Africa and Asia. Three times as many children of European or American origin go to university.

Israel has short-term as well as long-term interest in this. For the country is suffering from a shortage of skilled labor, and the Oriental immigrants do not bring the skills Israel needs most. Two factors could aggravate this. As agricultural techniques improve, Israel foresees the day when the country will be able to grow all the food needed with a much smaller work force: more labor will be needed in factories than in fields. This situation could be worsened because the natural increase of the second Oriental Jews is greater than that of the Europeans.

Israel is striving to fight off the threat of a permanently under-privileged class by extending elementary school hours for the Orientals, by slum clearance, and by sending volunteer civilian teachers or girls doing their army service into outlying settlements. But it is a hard fight.

Unlike immigrants of other countries who are eager to align themselves with the scale of values of the established inhabitants—the pattern one finds in the United States, Canada or Australia—the newcomer to Israel seems to feel himself so much a part-owner of the new land that his tendency is to try to impose his own values. He also tends to regard the resistance of the settled community as a deliberate act of non-acceptance and willful discrimination.

One voice has been raised encouraging this tendency. Kalman Katzenbach, an elderly writer, claimed in a book published last year that Oriental Jewry was worthless and had little affinity with European Jewry, thus virtually advocating outright discrimination. The general rejection of this thesis included strong condemnation by the Prime Minister, and the Association of Book Distributors banned the book from the shops.

There are extremes in the other direction too: what a minister has called "suffering from an excess of democracy." Sometimes, if an Oriental and a Western Jew of equal qualifications put in for the same job, the job goes to the Oriental because "we are so anxious to prove that we don't use our intellectual superiority to take advantage."

Blunting the edge of ethnic friction, however, is the extraordinary upward mobility within Israeli society. It is not unusual for an immigrant to arrive penniless and knowing nobody in the establishment, to rise within a few years—as mayor of an immigrant town, a manager of a successful business co-operative, even as a Member of Parliament. And the Oriental is not excluded. (London Observer Service)

After Churchill

By JOHN GRIGG

(Reprinted by arrangement with The Manchester Guardian)

SO it is all over at last. Winston Churchill is dead, but we might as well admit that, for most of us, the essential Churchill died about ten years ago. We have to learn—indeed, we should have learnt already—to live without Churchill.

His illness has stirred the most deep and strange emotions, especially in those of us who felt the impact of his leadership in 1940. He appealed to our tribal instincts at a moment when the cause of our tribe was also the cause of freedom—when British patriotism was enough. While the old chieftain was breathing his last, one could almost sense the whole tribe was dragging its breath in sympathy.

His marvelous talents were devoted to his country and to liberty; these were the principles which ruled his life, and he went wrong only when the two were in conflict (as over India in the 1930s), or when he failed to perceive the true interests of the one or the other. At the supreme climax of his career the two were in perfect harmony and his perceptions were brilliantly clear.

The Nation Goes On

It is natural that we should feel for him as for no other man, but our reverence should not subside into idolatry, nor should it become identified with that day-dreaming inertia which has plagued us since the war. The business of the nation must be carried on, and the awful solemnities of the last few days should act as a tonic rather than as a sedative.

Churchill is known as the architect of victory, and so he was. But whose victory? Britain emerged from the war with more honor, but less power, than she had at the outset. For the United States and the Soviet Union the fruits of victory were substantial; they became, as de Toqueville long ago foretold, the two great imperial powers of a new world order.

Israel has short-term as well as long-term interest in this. For the country is suffering from a shortage of skilled labor, and the Oriental immigrants do

Inevitable Liquidation

What Churchill achieved, therefore, was a delusive victory for Britain. That he saved his country from defeat and dishonor goes without saying. He successfully defied the power of our enemies, but he could not defy the power of our friends. Though he claimed—and doubtless believed—that he had not become the King's First Minister to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire, he had no choice but to acquiesce in a state of affairs which made that liquidation inevitable. He presided, in fact, over the inauguration of the American empire.

Historians may have to record that he was less aware of this development than of the countervailing encroachment of Soviet Russia. He saw most clearly the sinister threat from the East, which was indeed a threat not only to national independence but also to personal freedom. He seems, however, to have been relatively blind to the implications of American supremacy in the West. God knows, there is nothing sinister about the American empire, which has sustained and defended personal freedom during a period of acute danger. But even the most benevolent empire is a threat, willy-nilly, to the dignity and self-respect of its subordinate parts, and the American Raj is no exception.

The death of Churchill robs us of an august and (in his old age) a well loved presence, but it also relieves us of a psychological burden. England's grand old men are, as it were, canonized, and for some years past Churchill's basic assumptions in foreign affairs have largely shared that immunity from criticism which Churchill himself has enjoyed. Now we can take stock, once again, of our position.

Facing Facts

Some faint hearts or ill wishers will say that our national greatness has died with Churchill. They will be proved wrong. But we shall not be able to recapture the initiative, or regain the morale which he used to such prodigious effect in 1940, until we face contemporary facts unblinkingly and shape our policies accordingly.

Patriotism is still the emotional masquerade—but patriotism, like Churchill's, of a generous sort, combining the love of country with the wider love of liberty, and asserting itself now in the context of a renascent Europe. There is no future for us as a semi-detached European state, or as a semi-attached state of the American Union, or as the imaginary centre of a centrifugal Commonwealth. We have to make a hard, clear choice, and it may be easier for us to make it now that Churchill has passed out of the limbo of frail mortality.

Son and Heir To Chiang

By STANLEY KARNOW
from Hong Kong

THE question of the succession to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, the septuagenarian Chinese Nationalist leader, who sits in sad and lonely splendor on his island retreat of Formosa, has been indirectly answered by Chiang himself. He has appointed his elder son, General Chiang Ching-kuo, to be Nationalist China's Defence Minister, and has designated "Young Chiang" as his heir.

On paper the promotion appears enormous, but in reality it is ratification of power that the Generalissimo's son has built up over the past decade. Chiang-Kuo has long controlled the 100,000-strong "Youth Corps" and heads the "Retired Servicemen's Commission," an organization of 200,000 military veterans. He also directs the "Anti-Communist National Salvation Army," a quasi-clandestine guerrilla force that carries out secret forays against mainland China.

Perhaps most important, however, he manages virtually all the Kuomintang political agents in the Nationalist armed forces. Through his military security network he runs a powerful secret police apparatus that makes him the most feared man on Formosa.

Chiang-kuo's critics have charged him with being no different from a Communist in his techniques. If the accusation has validity it is perhaps because Chiang's son was once a dedicated Communist. Back in 1925, when Chiang Kai-shek, then ruler on the Chinese mainland, was aided by the Soviet Union, he sent Chiang-kuo, then 16, to Moscow "to learn more about revolutionary ideas." The boy learned his lessons well. Two years later when Chiang broke with the Communists, Chiang-kuo denounced his father as a "counter revolutionary" and "traitor." Some time later he proclaimed himself "a whole-hearted Communist." Since then, Chiang-kuo has denied that he ever made such statements.

Shanghai Period

In 1927, after 12 years in Russia, Chiang-kuo returned to China with his Russian wife, a former engineer. His sense of social justice was shocked by the sight of a Nationalist regime riddled with corruption. In the brief period that he ruled Shanghai after the Second World War, he cracked down ruthlessly on speculators and profiteers. Both Chinese and Europeans who recall that period claim, however, that Chiang-kuo merely wiped out minor culprits. But big businessmen and bankers protected by the government, they say, managed to escape with fortunes.

After moving to Formosa with the retreating Nationalists, Chiang-kuo took the lead in smashing Communist infiltration. But in the name of anti-Communism he has continued to maintain many of the trapping of a Communist establishment on the island. His Youth Corps, for example, is organized along Communist lines, with cells, self-criticism meetings and "thought, reform" vacations on a remote island for deviantists.

Trained in special camps, Chiang-kuo's commandos are frequently sent on raids against mainland China. Most independent observers believe that these guerrilla units rarely score military achievements. But their activities serve to bolster Nationalist morale, somehow keeping alive the Nationalist dream of returning to the mainland.

Kennedy Difference

It was in search of U.S. support for attack against Communist China that Chiang-kuo went to Washington in September 1963. He spent 75 minutes with President Kennedy, reportedly arguing that Peking after the Red Guard needed only a slight push to topple over. Kennedy begged to differ, however, and Chiang-kuo went home empty-handed.

A recurrent question for the future is whether Chiang-kuo, now 56, will be content to live out his life on Formosa, dreaming like his father of reconquering China. Within recent years he has sought various ways to join the battle against Asian Communists. He tried late in 1960 to take part in the fighting in Laos, offering his troops. About the same time he reinforced the remnant of Nationalists operating in the jungles of Eastern Burma. Both these efforts were thwarted by Washington. However, some Chinese-Nationalist advisers and technicians are functioning under U.S. auspices in South Viet Nam.

Offers From Communists

At the same time, Chiang-kuo has been repeatedly accused of negotiating secretly with the Chinese Communists, presumably with a view to a deal with Peking after his father's death. He has acknowledged receiving offers from the Communists, but claims to have rejected them.

Judging from past performance, he is not likely to give Formosa the system of "democracy and constitutional rule" that he promises to restore in all China one day. Nor does he exude the appeal of the old generalissimo. It appears improbable that he could rule Formosa on the thin hope of reconquest, as his father has for 15 years.

In years to come, therefore, Chiang-kuo may find his role more filled with hazards than opportunities. The way he turns in his pivotal position will surely have more serious repercussions in the Far East. (London Observer Service)

LETTER

Fare Hike Detrimental

The high bus fares now in force appear to me both detrimental to the city and unfair.

Dr. Purdy, in a television interview, emphasized the fact that the amount awarded by the court for payment by the B.C. Hydro to the B.C. Electric was reduced by $19 million because they also took over the bus service. Dr. Purdy pointed out that this sum could be invested to yield $1 million per annum.

Most of the very large profits from the distribution of electricity and gas are derived from the coast cities, so surely their transportation should be subsidized from those profits.

It seems to the writer that these points have not been presented strongly enough to the government by our civic leaders and members of the legislature.

DENNIS THE MENACE

From the Times of Feb. 2, 1890:

Toronto: A civil engineer from Brantford, Ont., Henry Wickstead, published a proposal to the federal government to spend $70,000,000 to deepen the Ottawa and French rivers.

INSIDE POLITICS

With Douglas Fisher, M.P.

Mr. Fisher is the member for Port Arthur riding for the New Democratic Party.

Most of us in politics should never make fun of the ladies for their deceptions of either appearance or behaviour. We can be great self-deceivers.

This too portentous comment has been brought of through my own amusement at some of the recent statements of federal politicians. For a start, did you get a laugh out of John Diefenbaker's statement that he gets a lot of mail from Quebec and some 90 per cent of it is favorable to his policies? If Mr. Diefenbaker is taking his mail as a sensible basis for surveying the reaction to him in the country, he has reached the stage where confinement rather than retirement, is the answer. I can't believe he didn't have his tongue in his cheek when he painted the picture of a responsible Quebec, ready and willing behind him.

There is a remarkable tendency, of course, for a politician to exaggerate the significance of his mail. The social scientists have been at work in Washington on this matter and have shown from analysis there that the likelihood of a favoring letter to a politician outweighs the likelihood of an attacking letter by more than 10 to 1. That is, someone who agrees with your policy or positions on issues is ten times more likely to write than someone who disagrees. Most people who disagree or dislike you or even hate you, find it hard to go to the lengths of putting down their feelings. The main exceptions to this are letters or wires made by lobby or interest groups. There one soon spots through the repetition of words a more definite pattern.

Last week I bumped into an MP who was on his way to give Walter Gordon the devil over the snafu at year's end on the coins issued by the mint. He told me that it had brought him more mail and phone calls than the flag issue. My experience has been the same. In direct appeals by letter to me the question of the shortage of mint sets for Canadian collectors has outweighed the flag issue for me.

I do not take this as an indication the government is in danger over it or that it really is a more vital issue than the flag was. Simply, it affronted more individuals who had an intense personal interest. Thus the letters; thus the general feature of most letter-writing to politicians; they come from those with a heightened sensitivity and a personal commitment. Therefore, they are not a good gauge of general sentiment.

Like Mr. Diefenbaker, I get more mail from Quebec than from any other province. Like his mail, the overwhelming majority of mine is favorable to my criticism of Quebec politicians and the vaunting ambition of French-speaking nationalism. But I know with certainty that my mail is not a cross-section of Quebec feeling.

Another great example of apparent self-delusion in recent weeks has been Minister of Trade and Commerce Mitchell Sharp. He has been telling reporters, particularly in the West, that the Liberals are coming back on the Prairies, that Alvin Hamilton has tended to discredit himself among the farmers by claiming too much honor for his work when he was minister of agriculture. If you believed Mr. Sharp, the prairie farmer is itching to get a lot of Liberal MPs down in Ottawa. What fantasy. The drop in wheat prices must be unnerving Mr. Sharp. Here we have the cautious, creaky, hesitant old Canadian Federation of Agriculture demanding a subsidy for wheat. We have a prairie population with a memory keen on Liberal undertakings in 1963 for a two price system for wheat and a guaranteed $2 price for wheat. Surely Mitchell Sharp is too canny a man to believe his own blarney about a big prairie swing to his party.

Then one of my colleagues, Stanley Knowles of Winnipeg North Centre, got off a public statement last week that I found unbelievable or, put another way, I cannot believe he was serious. Mr. Knowles was quoted as demanding that Mr. Pearson re-convene parliament before February 16, in order to explain the dismissal of Yvon Dupuis. I suppose it may have had meaning as a play, designed to underline the present embarrassment of Mr. Pearson. But neither Mr. Pearson nor 263 other MPs, grateful for the break from the most frustrating of all sessions, can treat seriously the prospect of being back to Ottawa several weeks ahead of time in order to sniff out or howl for the details in the disposition of such a disposable politician as Mr. Dupuis. We all know Mr. Knowles loves parliament, beyond the ken of most of us, but enough is enough.

Immigration Procedures To Be Probed

OTTAWA (CP)—Toronto lawyer Joseph Sedgwick will make a second study of immigration department procedures, but the new one on discretionary powers of the immigration minister may delay his report on the earlier study of arrests, deportations and prosecution of illegal immigrants.

The new study, announced Monday by Prime Minister Pearson, is the result of the Dec. 21 Supreme Court of Canada ruling that the immigration minister does not have unlimited powers to order deportations.

The inquiry is "to deal with discretionary powers conferred by legislation on the minister of citizenship and immigration," the prime minister said, as "the most difficult questions in immigration policy centre on the use of these discretionary powers."

Mr. Sedgwick's first study of department procedures, dealing with illegal immigrants, was announced last June, and informants indicated Monday that his new task may delay his report for the time being perhaps does not want attention diverted in any way from himself.

IS ALMOST COMPLETED

However, it was understood Mr. Sedgwick had almost completed his first report when Mr. Pearson asked him by letter Jan. 27 to make the second study.

In announcing the new study after a meeting with Mr. Sedgwick Monday, Mr. Pearson said the Supreme Court decision "gives rise to new doubts" about the extent and use of discretionary powers by the minister.

Political Barbs Traded Over Wheat Price Cut

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Opposition Leader Mr. Diefenbaker and Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp Monday exchanged political barbs over the current cut in Canadian wheat prices.

Diefenbaker accused Sharp of spreading political propaganda; Sharp accused Diefenbaker of playing a leading role in promoting a price war.

Last week Diefenbaker and former Conservative agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton strongly criticized the trade minister for his handling of what they called a "price war" in the world wheat market.

Hamilton went as far as to call for Sharp's resignation for failing to carry out his responsibilities in the west.

Sharp emphatically denied that there was any price war going on, but the drop in wheat prices was an overall adjustment necessitated by a change from a sellers' to a buyers' mar-

Eyebrows Rise Over Absence Of Humphrey

LONDON (UPI)—The British Press, while not openly critical, has given considerable attention to the official U.S. representation at the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill among the kings, queens, presidents and prime ministers present.

The delegation at St. Paul's Cathedral was led by Chief Justice Earl Warren because Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who was to have had that role, had a fever and could not attend.

London's national press had anticipated that if President Johnson could not come because of his own illness, he would send Vice-President Hubert Humphrey in his place.

Rusk stayed in his hotel room while Warren and W. Averell Harriman, under secretary of state for political affairs, went with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, a private guest. But he was able to fly back to America with them in the afternoon.

The London Observer commented: "The funeral guest whose absence caused most perplexity was, sadly, President Johnson. His final decision not to make the trip was a surprise only because he was initially over-optimistic about his power to recover from his feverish cough.

NO EXPLANATION

But the awkward question was why Vice-President Hubert Humphrey did not come in his stead. To this there is no official explanation in Washington. It has caused some collective raised eyebrows there and a feeling that President Johnson for the time being perhaps does not want attention diverted in any way from himself.

The Sunday Telegraph said, "Mr. Johnson's failure to nominate Vice-President Humphrey as his chief representative at Sir Winston's funeral has led to considerable muttering in Washington."

The Daily Mail, under the headline, "America Blushes Over Funeral," said from Washington: "Executives of the Johnson administration were still blowing their noses today after the representation debacle of Sir Winston Churchill's funeral . . . but it was more in embarrassment than from sniffles . . .

Turning Point Reached in UN On Peace-Keeper Debt Crisis

By CARMAN CUMMING

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The long debate on United Nations peace-keeping debts reached a turning point Monday as the General Assembly again put off a showdown.

The assembly recessed for a week, but diplomats said they expect an indefinite adjournment to follow after several "house-keeping" problems have been settled.

The new delay, following American and British insistence that the issue be brought up again, raised doubt about whether the assembly would ever act to remove the vote of the Soviet Union and 12 other member countries.

It also appeared to rule out any chance that the assembly, already four months behind schedule, would be able to hold a normal session.

Any adjournment until late spring or summer would probably mean that most problems would be put over to assembly's 20th session in the autumn.

HAD TO PAY PRICE

But some Western diplomats said the picture was not all black. They conceded that a high price had been paid to avoid a showdown, but felt it was a price that had to be paid.

They said both the United States and Russia had pulled back from the brink of confrontation and thus tacitly admitted that they did not want one. They hoped that the pullback would give new impetus to negotiations.

Informants also said there was general agreement that the negotiations now will be broad-based.

ended to include all aspects of the peace-keeping problem, and not just the back debts.

The decision to put off a showdown was announced by Secretary-General U. Thant as a consensus, to which no one objected.

Thant said there appeared to be common agreement on these points:

- That all members want to put aside their differences in order to get the United Nations out of its present difficulties.

- That a confrontation over application of Article 19 should be avoided at this session.

- That voluntary financial contributions should be made to save the organization from bankruptcy, without prejudice as to views of individual members as to the legality of peace-keeping dues.

- That the contributions should be made as early as possible, with the highly-developed countries contributing the most to wipe out about $133,000,000 in unpaid assessments.

- That a comprehensive review of the whole question of peace-keeping operations should be undertaken, possibly by a 21-nation working group now studying the problem, and a report made to the assembly as soon as possible.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Walter Alvarez

Ever since I was a boy, and my mother used to refuse my request to go on Saturday up into my beloved mountains back of Honolulu, where I lived, I have marvelled when parents get themselves into a fight with a child by refusing a request, which so far as I can see is perfectly reasonable.

When I was a boy and my mother refused my request to go up in the hills with my chums, I immediately started to wear her down by constantly begging and pleading and asking why I should be denied one of my greatest pleasures. Eventually I used to say to my mother, "The only reason you say no is that you will worry when I am gone, and I don't think that's a good reason for denying me."

Eventually, I virtually always wore my mother down. Because she had a great tendency to migraines headaches, after the long argument with me, often she had to go to bed for the rest of the day, with nausea and a terrible pain over one eye. If only, when I had asked permission to go, she had said, "Yes, dear; go, and have a wonderful day," I would have been happy and she would have been well.

I am writing this as I sit in a huge airport, waiting for my plane to take off. What has made me thoughtful has been that near me there is a nice-looking couple, a man and his wife, with two small boys and one bright and pretty little girl of perhaps five years. All went well until the little girl said to her father, "Daddy, please lift me up so that I can look out of the window; I want to see the plane."

For some unknown reason the father told her she could not look out, and as a result the child lost her temper—and went into a big tantrum and set up a tremendous howl. As she howls, I can sense her great anger and her feelings of outrage against her father.

Matters were not helped when he spanked her. That only caused the howls of wrath to be louder. Now she wants everyone in the airport to know how very angry she is. And it all could have been avoided if her father had only lifted her up for a minute to look out of the window!

I suppose a hundred times, sitting in a home where there were small children, I have seen a mother get the place into an uproar by telling a child to stop the harmless thing he was doing, or by telling him to go upstairs and lie down, or to go somewhere and do something or other. And the child said, "I'm busy; I'm making a house out of these blocks."

It seemed to me so foolish for the mother to "start something" when everything was perfectly quiet and peaceful. Perhaps after a few minutes, she spanked the child for insubordination, and then was so ashamed of herself for having lost her temper that she was sick for the rest of the day.

Vancouver-Victoria Metro Plan Wins Saanich Council Support

Saanich council Monday night backed up Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox's suggestion of an inter-municipal committee of metro Victoria and Vancouver.

Councillors unanimously passed a motion indicating their interest in sending a representative to an exploratory meeting.

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said there is a need of such an association.

But one danger to be considered was that rural municipalities might feel such a move would fragment the Union of B.C. Municipalities, he said.

SCHOOL BUDGET

Council was told the 1965 budget for school district 61 was $11,660,000 compared with $10,300,000 last year and for school district 63 the budget was $1,917,000 compared with $1,400,000 previously.

Comptroller-treasurer John Tribe said Saanich's share won't be known until the provincial government grant formula is issued.

Council approved the Queenswood community plan which must now go to the cabinet for approval. The area, home for about 15 families, would be preserved as a prime residential area.

Technicality Quashes Case Against Pair

A legal technicality resulted in charges being quashed against two juveniles in city court on Monday.

The two youths had been transferred from juvenile court on a joint charge of indecent assault, but because the information charging them did not bear the name of the Queen the charges were quashed.

One of the juveniles, Gerald Harvey, who earlier pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property, was remanded in custody to await sentence on Feb. 8.

In handing down his judgment Magistrate Ostler suggested the Crown appeal his decision so the matter could be decided by a final authority.

There was some indication the Crown would lay new informations charging them in juvenile court with the same offence.

Court Orders Examination After Incident

A 22-year-old man who tried to crash through two windows Saturday in the Royal Jubilee Hospital will be examined by a psychiatrist.

He was remanded to Wednesday for the examination when he appeared in city court Monday.

Gregory Francis Pierce, of 915 Fullerton, pleaded guilty to causing wilful damage.

A policeman testified Pierce had been in the waiting room of the hospital at about 11:45 p.m. when he picked up a glass ashtray and broke it on the floor.

The policeman said Pierce then picked up the broken glass and cut his arm and wrist and then tried to jump through two windows.

The constable said Pierce was restrained in a strait-jacket.

Inducement Alleged But Plea to Stand

A youth testified in court Monday he was offered an inducement by a city detective to sign a statement which "admitted certain facts" in December, 1964.

The testimony was given by Gerald Harvey, 17, in support of an application to change his plea to "not guilty" on a charge of possession of stolen property. It was laid by city police early in January.

Harvey testified under oath city detective Lyle Somers agreed not to "lock him up for Christmas" if he signed a statement following an interview in the police-station before Christmas.

Harvey told the court when he was being interviewed by Det. Somers he asked the detective: "If I sign a statement will I be let out for Christmas?"

Harvey said Det. Somers left the room and returned a short time later and said: "Ya, we will play ball with you."

He said the detective explained they would proceed by warrant "or something" after they had seen the prosecutor.

Harvey was then allowed to leave.

NO CHANGE

Magistrate Ostler did not allow the change of plea. He ruled that although an irregularity in the obtaining of the statement was alleged, there was no evi-

MUSICAL COMEDY IN CITY

Ballet Sparkles Like Champagne

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

It was a night of musical comedy rather than opera ballet but one would have to be an extreme purist to complain over the offerings of Ruth Page's Chicago Opera Ballet at the Royal Theatre on Monday.

The evening had a champagne quality. It was like a brilliantly colored, much belaced and be-ribboned valentine.

There came one moment to delight the ultra ballet buff — when the exquisite classical form of guest stars Irina Borowska of the London Festival Ballet and Karl Musil of the Vienna Opera Ballet danced the traditional Black Swan de Deux.

Miss Borowska is a dazzling artist. She has the impeccable style of the true ballerina assoluta. Her balance on single pointe, her prouettes and leaps verge on the fantastic.

As her partner, Musil showed a fine, if not spectacular form.

Two full ballets were per-

POST CARDS

DEMAND MEDICARE

Demands that Canada establish comprehensive medicare plan immediately are rolling in at a 200-a-day clip.

E. P. O'Neal, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, told the Lower Island Democratic Party Association Monday night that the ultimate target is 300,000 signed post

The post cards, 150,000 addressed to Premier Bennett and 150,000 addressed to Prime Minister Pearson, were distributed last Thursday.

The cards to the premier call for immediate legislation to make way for national medicare. The cards to Mr. Pearson set a July 1, 1967, deadline for introduction of the scheme.

Mr. O'Neal said he was delighted with the reaction so far. "We only got going little over two days ago and already we have 500 cards back. We want action, not promises. God knows we've had enough of those," he said.

"This is a new and serious challenge," he said, "and we must watch it carefully."

There is also a serious problem in teachers keeping up-to-date, said Dr. McTaggart-Cowan.

"We must re-examine the purpose of the sabbatical leave for teachers," he said. "It should be a time when a man can seek retraining."

"New knowledge is being acquired at least ten-times faster than in previous years," he told the Extension Association of the University of Victoria.

"This means completely new approaches to teaching must be found—we can't just keep adding a new textbook every year."

"Already the trend is for a longer academic work week while modern technology is shortening the work week in all other labor fields."

"Students are having to work much harder than in previous years to keep up with the rapid advancements."

"Universities must take the lead in trying new ideas and put a greater measure of resources into research into education itself," said Dr. McTaggart-Cowan.

He said some of the new ideas that will be implemented at Simon Fraser University include a trimester system and special emphasis on oral methods of teaching.

Ed Blake is chairman of the door-to-door drive which begins the night of March 1. Members will offer packages of eight bulbs at regular retail prices.

Patterson 'The Winnah' But Chuvalo Gets Glory

Hal Malone
LOOKS AT SPORTS

Diary of a weekend:
Saturday, 9:30 a.m.—Drove two daughters to First United for basketball game. Stayed to watch. Closed eyes periodically. Recalled how it must have been at Dieppe. First United, 76; Sacred Heart—Yawn.

Girls supposed to be 12 or 13, but some looked old enough to wear mascara and eye shadow. On way home expected girls to replay contest with appropriate sobs. They talked about cute referee and what color sweater goes best with what color skirt.

In late afternoon was accosted by eldest spinster daughter, returning from girls' basketball jamboree.

Me: "You look happy. Did you win?"
Her: "No, but it was fun."
Me: "That's nice. Was it close?"
Her: "One game was."
Me: "One game?"
Her: "Yes, we played four."
Me: "You better rest."
Her: "Why?"
Me: "Well, because . . . er, forget it."
Who says youth is getting soft.

4:30 p.m.: Turned on idiot box to watch $100,000 Charles S. Strub Handicap at Santa Anita. Mindful of Christmas bills on desk, looked anxiously for something good to get down on.

Hearld GH-Stratton as much as say Hill Rise couldn't lose. Thought of getting shirt on Hill Rise. Refrained. Every time I bet on something that can't lose it can't win. Thought of betting George Royal:

Remembered what Bill Lochead said about George Royal's race behind Hill Rise two weeks ago.

"If they don't change strategy, George Royal won't ever beat Hill Rise," Lochead was saying.

Donnie Richardson stayed on Hill Rise's tail. Moved the same time, but on the outside. Against a horse like Hill Rise you have to let him go and then make your run or else gun past him early, catch him unawares.

Lochead claims that horses, as well as humans, are psychologically bothered by running outside and behind. They tend to get "discouraged."

Did Lochead think George Royal might do better with another rider? Like Shoemaker or Hartack or Valenzuela?

"No," he said. "The horse runs for Richardson. And Donnie's the kind who would pull himself off if he thought another boy could do the job better."

Almost bolted to get money down on Hill Rise when Stratton recalled that the "big horse" had won previous Strub Stakes. Crimson Satan and Gun Bow were the "big" ones. Hill Rise seemed to fit that description.

Watched race. Am still waiting for Hill Rise and George Royal. Isolated camera showed Hill Rise getting into more trouble than fat lady in revolving door.

Noticed, though, that when Don Pierce went to outside in stretch and put his feet through the floorboards there was no petrol left in Hill Rise's tank. One observer noted that George also had traffic trouble.

Think George Royal's main problem is Santa Anita. Track is harder than a Communist's heart. Colt's best races are on a deep cushion. Intend to watch California weather reports and catch George when heavy mist is apparent.

6 p.m.: National Hockey League was billed on television but somebody made a mistake. Looked more like passage out of "Three Stooges." Boston skated occasionally. Were excellent on pirouettes and pratfalls, but muck when asked to carry puck.

In the name of "rebuilding" Bruins have cast off Charley Burns and Pat Stapleton, bright lights in Western League galaxy. Larry Keenan and Milan Marceca do more things with puck than some of the ballet dancers Mill Schmidts dresses. So do Billy McNeill and Leo Labine.

8:30 p.m.: Marceca confirmed opinion of his stature by scoring first Victoria Maple Leafs' goal on play that Boston couldn't execute against Poor Clares.

Marceca used Dan Belisle as blocking back, sent Rollie Wilcox out as decoy flanker and gave Don Head no chance.

Araized when Leafs subsequently acted like hitting went out of style and let Ports take 2-1 lead.

Nearly fell-off cigar when Ports made perfect pass to Lou Jankowski in front of Head. Jan used stick like three-iron to sink putt. Giveaway night?

9 p.m.: Marvelled at Eddie Mazur. With Head out getting a sandwich in first period, Mazur had whole goal to himself and managed to bounce puck off post. Now Mazur drills puck two feet over Head's topknot. Head turns to see who's going to get puck and nearly falls out of pants when it hits back of his shoulder and falls softly into net.

Wonder how long Mazur has practised this play.

9:15: Come to conclusion that referee (sort of) Ron Wicks would make ideal psychoanalyst's study.

Wicks has eye trouble when Portland's Connie Madigan wears stick around Leaf throats or tries to pluck out their ribs with blade. But on defensive plays that most judges would overlook Wicks bolls over—and his sap shows. Make note to nominate him for most consistent inconsistent referee of year.

10:15: In office of Maple Leafs, head cook Rudy Pilous looks like man who has just put over five-horse-win parlay. Try to talk to Portland counterpart, Hal Laycoe, but Laycoe isn't talking. That's not right. Laycoe is talking but I haven't got ashes to typewriter.

Sunday—all day: Try to figure out what happened in Santa Anita race. Should have been duel between Hill Rise and George Royal but—What was that name again? Of course. Duet. Won handily and paid $14. Best bunch play of the race. Who says form pays?

Ontario Legislator Demands Greater Cut

TORONTO (CP)—A demand Club, six per cent to the Ontario government and five per cent to the federal government.

John J. Mooney, managing director of the Jockey Club, said in an interview Monday night that of the nine per cent, the entire amount goes into operating expenses, most of which is pure money. Any revenue that the investors in the Jockey Club have a chance to gain profit from is admissions and concessions.

Last year the government took in more than $8,000,000 from its six per cent. The only thing they did in return was make up a small deficit of the racing commission, plus give the breeders' awards amounting to approximately $130,000. They spent not over $200,000.

Elmer Sophia, Liberal member of the legislature for Sudbury, told the legislature's committee on government commissions that Ontario does not get enough tax revenue from race tracks.

He said the Ontario government should get nine per cent of the handle—amount of money wagered—and the Jockey Club should get six. Currently, nine per cent goes to the Jockey

'I Proved I Haven't Got A China Chin'—Floyd

NEW YORK (UPI)—Promoter Harry Markson is trying today to arrange a May re-match of the great 12-round fight in which Floyd Patterson outpointed "white hope" George Chuvalo before 19,100 deliriously delighted fans at Madison Square Garden.

But double ex-heavyweight champion Patterson, about $140,000 richer and deservedly proud of his triumph, said he thought he deserved a shot at Cassius Clay's heavyweight crown.

"I not only won," explained the elated 30-year-old Floyd of Great Neck, N.Y., "but I proved I haven't got a chin chin. And I got the unanimous decision."

Twenty-seven-year-old Chuvalo of Toronto, heavyweight champion of Canada, demanded a re-match because of the alleged "better breaks" that he claimed referee Zack Clayton "gave Patterson throughout the fight."

Patterson, weighing 197½ pounds—the heaviest of his career—was favored at 7-5 but many of the boxing experts doubted his ability to go the distance against brawny, dark-haired Chuvalo, who was seeking his fifth straight knockout. The Canadian slugger-scaled 208 pounds.

NO KNOCKDOWNS

There were no knockdowns but Chuvalo had his right eye closed in the final round. He also was bleeding from cuts above and below his left eye and on his forehead.

Chuvalo forced the fight round after round as he tried to flatten the only man who had worn the heavyweight crown twice. But Floyd called upon his skill and rapid-fire punching to avoid being belted out and meanwhile to subject the Canadian "iron man" to embarrassing punishment.

The 12-round elimination was not only one of the best fights ever staged in the Garden but it was the richest non-title match ever held anywhere.

LOSER GETS $85,000

It drew a live gate of $166,423 at the Garden, and an estimated $600,000 at theatre-TV locations in the United States and Canada. Patterson's 32½ per cent of the total net proceeds was estimated at $140,000, Chuvalo's 20 per cent at about $85,000.

It was the first time Patterson had fought in the Garden since June 8, 1956, when he outpointed Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson, despite a broken right hand, and took his longest step toward winning the crown.

Chuvalo's greatest strength was shown in the sixth, seventh and eighth rounds. Although the Canadian had concentrated on body blows earlier in the bout, he cut loose, in the sixth with a short hooking attack to the head that had Floyd staggering. Returning to the body in the seventh, he almost jackknifed Floyd with a right and two left hooks to the stomach.

The Canadian had an edge in the eighth despite Floyd's rally in the last minute.

CROWD BOOED CLAY

Patterson came on to take the 9th, 10th and 11 rounds as he out-boxed and out-punched the Toronto slugger. George had an edge in the 12th when his volleys of leather caused Floyd to spit out his mouthpiece. However, Floyd rallied and closed George's right eye with a solid, straight right. They fought on after the final bell until the referee separated them.

In his fourth straight victory and his 42nd in 46 fights, Patterson earned the challenger's title to fight for the World Boxing Association's title, now vacant.

The Canadian champion said he was never hurt although Patterson threw a good many dazzling combinations.

He Never Takes A Back Step . . .

NEW YORK (CP)—"I just couldn't fight my kind of fight," a sad but apparently unscathed George Chuvalo said Monday night after dropping a 12-round decision to Floyd Patterson.

"I opened up in the last couple of rounds, or at least tried to," the Canadian heavyweight boxing champion told reporters in his dressing room.

"I didn't necessarily think I had to get a knockout to win but I didn't like the way the fight was going."

"I don't like the way the referee handled the fight."

"Every time I started to get going, the referee would break us up," Chuvalo said. "He just wouldn't let me fight my fight."

"He gave the reporters the impression he had more trouble with referee Zach Clayton than he had with Patterson."

"Patterson is not a tremendous puncher," Chuvalo said.

Prosperity Keeps NHL Closed Shop

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Hockey League's board of governors meeting here today had an interested onlooker from Los Angeles but if NHL president Clarence Campbell is right he will remain on the outside looking in.

"Los Angeles has been bidding for a National League franchise at every opportunity," Campbell said Monday, "but I don't think it can come right now."

Campbell compared the league to a grocer with no more merchandise to sell.

"Our problem is inordinate prosperity," he said. "I believe expansion can only be justified by economics and that it will have to be linked with a major television contract."

Other subjects likely to come up at today's meeting included a proposal by Chicago Black Hawks' owner James Norris.

MESSAGE FROM FLOYD

This was part of action missed by boxing fans hoping to watch heavyweight fight on closed-circuit television Monday night at Memorial Arena. It came in third round as former champion Floyd Patterson made his intentions known by clouting

George Chuvalo with hard right. Fight had sellout New York crowd roaring for 12-round distance, but TV fans in Victoria and four other western Canada cities were without picture for nine rounds due to fuse failure. (AP Wirephoto.)

LYNNE CHUVALO:

'He Never Takes A Back Step . . .

NEW YORK (CP)—"I just couldn't fight my kind of fight," a sad but apparently unscathed George Chuvalo said Monday night after dropping a 12-round decision to Floyd Patterson.

"I opened up in the last couple of rounds, or at least tried to," the Canadian heavyweight boxing champion told reporters in his dressing room.

"I didn't necessarily think I had to get a knockout to win but I didn't like the way the fight was going."

"I don't like the way the referee handled the fight."

"Every time I started to get going, the referee would break us up," Chuvalo said. "He just wouldn't let me fight my fight."

"He gave the reporters the impression he had more trouble with referee Zach Clayton than he had with Patterson."

"Patterson is not a tremendous puncher," Chuvalo said.

CONFOUNDS CRITICS

"But I proved I was no china closet—I showed them I could take a punch," Floyd Patterson said exultantly Monday night after his rousing and unanimous 12-round victory over George Chuvalo of Toronto.

Beads of sweat dripping from his dark body and so weary he could hardly stand, the 30-year-old former world title holder, coming back from boxing's graveyard, talked softly of his future plans in the sweaty madhouse dressing room at Madison Square Garden.

"I think I proved I deserve a shot at Cassius Clay," he said, puffing between words. "As all boxers feel, I believe I can win back the heavyweight championship."

Patterson had nothing but the highest praise for his beaten opponent, saying almost poetically:

"I think my opponent gained more in defeat than I did in victory. He was a tough, stubborn man. It was like trying to fell an oak tree."

CONFOUNDS CRITICS

"But I proved I could take a punch, and come back fighting."

Patterson said if the projected return title fight between champion Cassius Clay and Sonny Liston comes off, he would have another fight himself before meeting the winner.

"In that case, I think I should fight Chuvalo again. He deserves another chance."

Chuvalo seemed alert and in good spirits, considering the verdict, and chatted easily and enthusiastically with the crowd of reporters overrunning the dressing room.

When Chuvalo returned, beaten, to his dressing room from the arena where the sell-out crowd was still shouting its appreciation of the fight, his wife, Lynne, pretty and drowsy, was with him.

She went in with him but was promptly ordered out again by functionaries of the New York State Athletic Commission.

"Don't let the woman in yet," somebody bellowed.

"George put everything into this," Mrs. Chuvalo sobbed, falling into the arms of Sylvia Unger, the manager's wife.

"He'll win!"

She looked up again before reporters left her to go into the dressing room. "Next time George fights here, he'll win."

"There's one thing you can still say about George Chuvalo," she said, in a calmer tone. "He never takes a back step to any man."

INSPIRED BY CROWD

Patterson said he was inspired by the support of the crowd, which was yelling at the end:

"Let's go, Floyd—go get him."

Floyd said he had trained specifically to fight Chuvalo's type of fight—aggressive.

"But as you say, it was when I was most aggressive that I got hit by those stinging punches."

By Ernie Fedoruk

Golf's professionals, forgetting who they are, are planning to make life difficult for "the outlaws."

That being the case, the Royal Canadian Golf Association, it is hoped, may be forced to review its ironclad stand on reinstatement.

If the pros' rumored plans are put into effect, the outlaws will become nobodies.

The way we hear it, the pros want "complete membership" in their association. Under existing regulations, some pros will not be granted membership because they are not employed by any golf club.

Art Donaldson is such an outlaw... neither professional nor amateur.

Perry Mason Fedoruk puts Mr. Donaldson's case on the dock because the Gorge Vale swinger has again applied for amateur reinstatement.

He asked for his amateur card eight years ago but was turned down by the RCGA. "Wait another five years," they told him.

ART DONALDSON — The golf-governors must consider Donaldson's case carefully. They must consider conditions then and now. They also must consider, perhaps, Donaldson's future value as an amateur player and/or executive. And they must consider what the pros are hoping to do.

Day by day, the pros are making it increasingly difficult for anyone to get into their shop, as Victoria's Bill Wakeham discovered. Wakeham almost never made it, and Washington State pros are still unhappy because he did.

But that's another story.

This is not a request for an easement of reinstatement regulations. These should be difficult, as they are, but they should not be impossible.

The outlaws should be given a chance.

Gangly George Archer, last year a little late and $1.88 short, today finds himself in the exclusive circle of the professional golf elite.

Four birds on the last five holes at San Francisco Sunday elevated his status. They gave him the $8,500 first prize in the Lucky International Open on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff with Bob Charles, the New Zealand southpaw who holds the British Open crown.

Last year Archer finished his rookie season as No. 51 on the Professional Golfers' Association list. He had earned $14,867.85 but didn't win a tournament. Paul Bondeson ranked just above him with $14,869.73. The top 50 win automatic exemption from qualifying for all PGA tournaments during the following year.

So by the margin of $1.88, Archer was scheduled among those who must face qualifying rounds for each tourney, take undesirable starting times and otherwise suffer with the pro proletarians.

All this changed Sunday for the six-six California golfer cowboy. His triumph qualified him for the rest of the year's 38 tournaments, the Tournament of Champions at Las Vegas, the U.S. PGA and put him in line for an invitation to the Masters.

MORALE HIGH

Chelsea Chasing Soccer 'Triple'

LONDON (Reuters) — Chelsea, the Southwest London club, is chasing a unique English soccer "triple sweep—the Football Association Cup, the first-division championship and the Football League Cup.

Chelsea moved into the fifth round of the FA Cup Saturday by knocking out the defending champion, neighboring West

Ham United, by the only goal of the match.

This win boosted Chelsea's already high morale, and it looks likely to move to the top of the first division next weekend when it returns to league soccer.

Chelsea will be at home to another London club, luckless Arsenal, smarting from its shock defeat in the Cup Saturday by fourth division Peterborough United.

At present Chelsea is one point behind Leeds United.

In the League Cup competition, Chelsea looks all set to reach the final. It already has won the first leg of its semi-final against Aston Villa, 3-2 at Villa Park, so can face the return leg in London Feb. 10 with confidence.

Little Stockport County, which shared the giant-killing Cup feats with Peterborough Saturday by holding Cup favorite Liverpool to a 1-1 draw, could fill its Edgeley Park ground many times over for Wednesday's replay. But police have placed a limit of 24,500 on the crowd for the match, which has captured the imagination of all soccer fans in the Cheshire town.

Stockport County, bottom of the fourth division, was a 2,000-to-one outsider in the betting before its gallant exploits last weekend. Liverpool, reigning first division champion, was six-to-one joint favorite with Manchester United, which meets Stoke City in a replay at Manchester Wednesday.

Middlesbrough, England (Reuters) — Michael Bailey, Charlton's captain and right-halfback, was carried off with a broken left leg after only 30 minutes in the English Football Association Cup fourth-round replay against Middlesbrough Monday night.

Middlesbrough won 2-1 after leading 2-0 at half time.

Fifth-round draw, to be played Feb. 20:

Leeds United or Everton vs. Shrewsbury Town.

Aston Villa vs. Wolverhampton Wanderers.

Peterborough United vs. Swans

Town.

Stock City or Manchester United vs. Reading or Burnley.

Middlesbrough vs. Leicester City.

Blackpool vs. Coventry City.

Chelsea vs. Tottenham Hotspur.

Crystal Palace vs. Nottingham Forest.

Five Undefeated in B.C. Bonspiel

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Six rinks were undefeated after five rounds of the 70th annual B.C. Curling Association bonspiel which opened here Monday.

Fifty-one rinks started in the competition. The 12 leading rinks at the close of play Wednesday night will join seven zone representatives in the B.C. interior playoffs Saturday.

Undefeated rinks entering to Day's play included Reg Stone and Buzz McGibney of Trail, Lionel Stokes of Whitehorse, Al Lachance of Prince George, L. Delaney of Quesnel and Eric Bisgrove of Summerland. Each had three wins and no losses.

BEATING last-minute deadline for transfers, inside Roy Hamilton has moved from Victoria United of Pacific Coast Soccer League to Canadian Scottish team in District League. Transfer deadline was Sunday night.

Publinx Golfers Are 'In'

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia golfers now "on the outside, looking in" won't have to any longer.

The B.C. Golf Association's annual meeting Friday approved a handicap system that will enable public players throughout the province to compete in sanctioned tournaments.

The system will allow golfers who are not members of BCGA affiliate clubs to acquire registration handicaps and participate in all tournaments.

BCGA president Peter Bentley told the meeting:

"This is one of the most progressive steps ever taken" by the association.

The new regulation will go into effect March 1.

Former golf pro Ernie Brown told the meeting there are "hundreds of golfers on the outside looking in simply because they can't obtain official handicaps."

"And waiting lists to clubs at public courses are growing longer each day."

Brown will administer the new "membership" category.

Last-Second Try Gives Vic High Rugby Triumph

Cliff Ridley scored a try on the last play of the game Monday to give Victoria High a 6-3 victory over Oak Bay in an Inter-High Second Division Rugby League match at Carnarvon Park.

Bob Seddon counted Vics' first try while Harold Tweed put Oak Bay's points on the board.

In another second-division match, North Saanich made the most of a manpower edge and thumped shorthanded Claremont 23-0.

Dan Coleman and Bob Longhead each counted two tries while Rick Soles booted four converts. Gordie Pearson also scored a try for Saanich.

Ivan Charges Referees Helping to Muzzle Hull

CHICAGO (AP) — Tommy Ivan, Chicago Black Hawk manager, blasted National Hockey League officials Monday and said scoring star Bobby Hull "is being fouled out" of his chance to set a single-season goal-scoring record.

Hull has failed to score in five successive games after ramming in 37 goals in his first 42. He has 23 games remaining and needs 14 goals to snap the NHL season mark of 50 which Hull shares with Maurice Richard and Bernie Geoffrion, retired Montreal Canadiens stars.

"It's not that Bobby isn't playing well enough right now to break the record, but he's just not being allowed to play his game," said Ivan. "Two weeks ago, I'd have said he couldn't miss . . . now I can only hope."

SINGLED OUT

"The referees don't call a quarter of the penalties they should against players trying to check Bobby. He is hooked and held and tripped more than any other player in the league. And because he's as great as he is, the refs seem to ignore what guys do to him—and they do plenty."

Ivan thinks the entire league may feel the impact unless steps are taken to improve treatment of Hull.

"It seems silly to me, that the biggest drawing card in the game should be handicapped for being the best. The average player would be knocked down by the stuff they pull on Bobby," Ivan said. "But he has great strength. They can't drag him down very often, no matter what they do to him. And he won't take a dive to impress officials."

DISH IT OUT

"He's too much of a gentleman to use some of the tactics a guy like Richard or Gordie Howe used when they were being treated the same way. They really could deal out punishment."

"I don't think Bobby should be a resort to that. But something certainly has to be done."

Hull continues to set the point pace despite giving up ground to teammate Stan Mikita. Hull has 64 points, eight more than Mikita.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Linda Kirk, age 12, of Peterborough, Ont., for her question:

What is the hardest mineral in nature?

The natural minerals we know are the rocky and metallic substances of the earth's crust. These upper layers of the solid earth reach down only 10 to 40 miles, and no one has been down to explore what materials lie beneath them. Down in the depths of our solid planet there may or may not be minerals much harder than those we know on the surface.

Every rock hound knows that hardness is one of the tests used to identify a new specimen from the crusty ground. The classes of mineral hardness run from 1 to 10, with degrees of difference in each class. Sulphur has a hardness of exactly 2. Borax, with a hardness of 1.7, is between classes 1 and 2, while glassy topaz, with a hardness rating of 3.5, is midway between classes 3 and 4.

Miss R.A.F., Savannah, Ga.

A. No, this is quite a normal thing. Her primary interest now is her mate, and many trained parakeets seemingly forget their training, and even their owners, when mates come into their lives. Once her mate is removed from the cage, Sparky most likely will revert to her friendly, performing self. If she doesn't, you can bring her around quickly by retraining.

W.T.P., Burlington, Vt.

A. There was. The now extinct giant moa grew 12 feet tall on the average. It's the tallest bird known. I don't think many people kept them as house pets.

Clinic: Q. Easter will be upon us soon, and thousands of helpless chicks and bunnies will die because unthinking parents permit their little ones to have them as gifts. Isn't there anything that can be done about this dreadful situation?

Mrs. G.H.K. Sr., Boston, Mass.

A. The only hope is that more unthinking parents will become more thoughtful. Tots, of course, have no understanding of the responsibilities of being a pet owner—and because of this countless birds and animals die needlessly each year. Each parent should make certain that his child is old enough to understand his responsibilities before allowing him to have any kind of a pet.

Grandstand Given Spur

Possibility of having the RCMP musical ride appear here next year is spurring action to replace burned-out Royal Athletic Park stands.

This and other possibilities prove the need for dealing with Athletic Park "as soon as possible," Mayor R. B. Wilson said in parks committee meeting today.

The following year, as part of Canadian Confederation centennial celebrations, a federally-sponsored military tattoo could also appear here, the mayor said.

"We just have to have this park by 1967," Ald. Geoffrey Edgerton said.

This is now beyond the city's means, but the possibility of having Royal Athletic Park area designated as an urban renewal project would mean the federal government pays most of restoration costs.

Vancouver Pacific National Exhibition has suggested a joint appearance on the west coast for the musical ride.

MUNICIPAL BOYCOTT BUT . . .

Hearing Is On Deputy States

A public inquiry into the proposed merger of a portion of View Royal with Esquimalt will continue tonight despite a municipal council boycott.

Inquiry chairman J. Everett Brown, deputy minister of municipal affairs, said today the hearing will be held as scheduled at 7:30 p.m. in View Royal Community Hall.

The inquiry will be adjourned to some later date after a few people have been heard," he said.

Mr. Brown's decision follows an Esquimalt council order Monday night prohibiting key municipal officials from attending meeting.

The officials had been asked to help clear up wranglings over the proposed merger of Esquimalt and View Royal panhandle.

CHAIRMAN CRITICIZED

The boycott was ordered after a heated discussion in which the inquiry chairman was criticized for his handling of the first meeting last Wednesday.

Municipal engineer John Graeme claimed the meeting was not properly controlled.

The inquiry is to determine where the boundary should be when the proposed merger takes place. Mr. Brown had asked municipal officials to attend tonight to answer questions.

Mr. Graeme told council he would not attend unless he was ordered.

He said: "I shan't be there tomorrow night if the meeting is going to be conducted in the same way."

"I'm not going to sit there and be abused . . . I've no objection to appearing before a public hearing and answering decent questions which are phrased decently."

"But there's no reason why we should be put through this sort of routine."

Mr. Graeme told council he would not attend unless he was ordered.

Backing him up, Reeve Wurtele said: "This is none of our doing. We were asked by the people (in the panhandle) if they could come in. We helped them with the petition. They set the boundaries."

One of the three commissioners, Coun. George Argyle said he didn't think the people at the meeting should be denied answers to their questions.

In answer to the complaints, Mr. Brown said he thought the hearing had been "generally orderly."

An inquiry conducted away from a courtroom is rather difficult. People think they're at a meeting and often get carried away," he added.

72-Hour-Week Ferry Plan Gets Discard

Schedule Protest Brings Results

By ROGER STONEBANKS

B.C. Ferries has dropped plans to work a ferry crew 72 hours a week for three months this summer with only one day off.

Instead, the crew on the Queen of Sidney will work an eight-hour day six days a week and the service will be canceled outside the tourist season.

START IN JUNE

The ferry will start a new service this June from Swartz Bay through the Gulf Islands to Tsawwassen and back.

The original schedule, posted last November, was for a full year's operation. Outside summer months, the work week was often only two days.

The B.C. Government Employees' Association protested the original schedule as reminiscent of early Industrial Revolution conditions.

"Basically, the adjustment was as we had requested," commented A. R. Kemp, assistant general secretary of the association.

TIME-AND-A-HALF

The 8,000-member group had requested an eight-hour day, a five-day week and the same overtime provisions as apply to other ferry crews.

The overtime provision, agreed to by B.C. Ferries for the Queen of Sidney, gives time and a half in pay for everything over 40 hours a week.

Mr. Kemp said the ferry will run in the same way as extra ferries on other runs—a nucleus of officers and men will be transferred from another vessel and temporary help hired to round out the compliment.

Ferry general manager Monty Aldous said the change was a reconsideration of scheduling.

"It was simply a management decision," he commented.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there a bylaw or other regulation which requires a resident to shovel snow and ice off the sidewalk fronting his property in Oak Bay, Saanich or Victoria? Is there a penalty for an offence? C.G.M.

A. Yes—all three municipalities have this covered under streets and traffic bylaws.

Oak Bay is the least expensive municipality if you are charged for this offence—the fine is not less than $1 or not more than $50.

In the city, it could cost you a fine and/or imprisonment—$250 or three months and Saanich fines are not less than $100 for the first offence.

Subsequent offences make a person liable to fines between $20 and $200.

HARBOR MASTER WARNS:

Busy Port Depends on Noisy Trucks

By JIM HUME

When the big lumber trucks stop driving to Ogden Point deep sea ships will no longer call at the Port of Victoria.

Capt. Ron Newell, harbor master, says the future of the port—which these days is handling gradually increasing tonnage—depends almost entirely on easy access trucking.

There have been complaints in the past about the noise and hazard of trucks carrying lumber to the docks.

"A certain amount of lumber can be loaded from scows it is true," he said Monday. "But for speed and economy the trucks are essential. If we ever lost the trucking services I'm afraid many ships would go elsewhere to load."

In 1963 the port had its record year, loading 586,329 tons of lumber on 413 deep sea freighters bound for international points. During the same period 26,037 tons were loaded for coastal ports.

1964 should have been a record year but severe winter weather, gales and storms along the coast kept many ships away.

HUGE FLEET

Even with the weather holding shipping to safer climes 363 freighters checked in and out of Victoria, a few carrying wheat from the Ogden Point elevator but mostly carrying rough lumber to world markets.

Tonnage figures for 1964 are not yet available.

Bad weather is also affecting this year's shipping figures with January showing a low 23 ships tying up at the five-berth wharf as compared with 35 in 1964 and 34 in 1963.

January 1959 was the last year shipping figures were so low for the first month of the year.

"A bad winter or dock strike are about the only things that hold us back from time to time," Capt. Newell said. "When things are normal Victoria stays a fairly steady port of call or even a slight increase as years go by."

Statistics bear the harbor master out.

NDP Thwarted On Committees

Sought to Activate Five House Groups

By JOHN MIKA

Times Legislative Reporter

Social Credit members today beat back a surprise series of moves by NDP members to force five usually inactive legislative committees to hold hearings in their fields during the current session.

In unprecedented moves, various NDP members submitted motions that chairmen of the agriculture, social welfare and education, municipal, mining and railways, and labor committees ask the legislature for instructions to consider a variety of matters within their purview.

The NDP members argued that these committees seldom met and often went for years holding only one meeting each session to select a chairman and nothing more.

Social credit members countered that such motions were out of order.

Herbert Bruch (SC-Esquimalt) said the NDP was trying "to pull a fast one" and he reported he had consulted with the clerk of the house who had confirmed that the committees could not initiate recommendations to the legislature at their organizational meetings.

Mr. Bruch and other Socreds argued that any individual MLA could ask the legislature to order the committees to hold hearings but the committees could not do so.

After the battles were over, NDP Leader Robert Strachan said the moves were made in order to ensure that the legislature worked democratically by insisting that the committee do a job of work each session.

The battles began with the agriculture committee, first of eight to hold organization sessions this morning at 15-minute intervals.

NEAR VICTORY

It was also the committee where the NDP strategy came closest to winning.

David Stupich (NDP-Nanaimo-Islands) was nominated in opposition to W. F. Jeacock (SC-Salmon Arm) as chairman of the committee—a rare event. But he lost out on a 6-3 ballot.

Mr. Stupich, recalling that the committee has not done any business for years, proposed that it ask the house to instruct it to hear representatives of the Farmers' Institute of B.C. as it had done traditionally some time ago.

Jacob Huhn (SC-North Peace River) surprised everyone by agreeing with the NDP and tying the vote at 4-4 on the motion.

Chairman Jeacock himself wavered for several minutes as the two sides vied for his tie-breaking vote. He finally voted against the Stupich motion, after insisting he personally wishes to see hearings held by the committee this year on the grounds that it violated the procedural rules.

Similar attempts were turned back in the other committees where they were launched by NDP members.

However, the forestry and fisheries committee, which elected C. M. Sheldon (SC-Omineca) as chairman, was told it definitely would hold hearings.

On Vancouver Island it was cloudy—but the groundhog has given up on coastal forecasts.

So this year, for traditional forecast, older proverbs will have to be recalled.

The Scots say: "If Candlemas is fair and clear, there'll be two winters in the year."

And the farmers' Europe comment: "February, second day, half your corn and half your hay."

For those who reject ancient verse there's the official forecast from the David Dunlap Observatory, Toronto: "Spring will officially begin at 9:10 a.m. EST, Saturday, March 20."

N. SAANICH MERGER PROBE URGED BY LEE

Central Saanich Reeve Gordon Lee today urged exploratory studies on the possibilities of amalgamating the districts of North Saanich and Central Saanich.

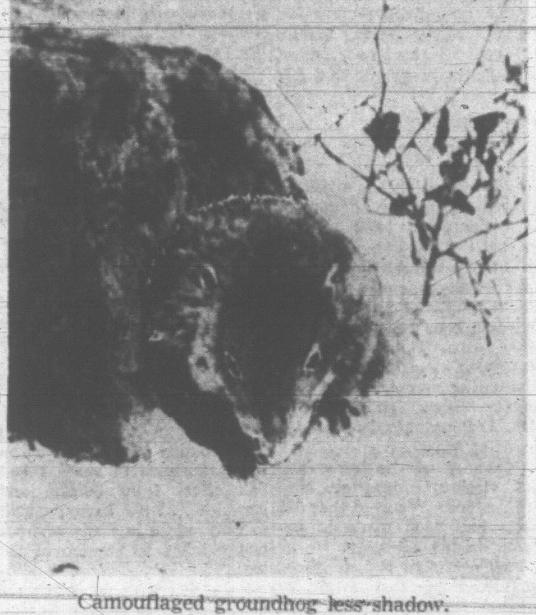

"I certainly would be worth exploring," he said. "Our interests are comparable."

The reeve's suggestion comes at a time when studies are being conducted to determine whether North Saanich should merge with Sidney or become a municipality.

Some North Saanich residents are opposed to merging with Sidney because of the diversified interests between the village and the unorganized district.

Early Spring Seen In Rodent's Absence

Ah, well, the groundhog always was a piker, anyway.

He's a Johnny-come-lately who found a good press agent in the United States and swiped a couple of ancient traditions to get annual bills in the world's newspapers.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

"What do you do when you're BRANDED? Wherever you go for the rest of your life. You must prove to them all. You're a man," the gang sang.

Producer Cecil Barker has strong credits such as the Red Skelton comedy show for the past eight years and production assistant to David Seznick on "Duel in the Sun" many years ago.

Larry Cohen, creator-writer, came out of the east where he wrote for such serious dramas as "East Side, West Side" and "The Defenders."

Lest we forget, another factor for success of the show will depend strongly on the homebody. He's the one upon whom the ratings are based.

"American Sportsman" debuted on ABC-TV Sunday with the first of four filmed treks with well-known names going after prize catches. The first program took us after a bluefin tuna, an African-pigeon species and a potential man-killer lion.

The camera and sound pickup technique on the show was the really big thing going for it. When the 500-pound tuna was caught there were as many exciting underwater scenes of the battling fish as there were shots of the angler on board the boat.

Robert (The Untouchables) Stack stalk of the man-killer lion was marked by great sound pickup of the conversation between himself and the white hunter guide before and after the kill.

There was also a conservational touch thrown in for good measure. The tuna was released after proving to the viewer it was indeed a big fish. The lion was killed, it was carefully explained, because it had become a cattle-killer and potential man-killer due to age and infirmity.

It's a crackerjack second-hand adventure worthy of the hour.

"American Sportsman" replaced the very funny but low-rated Bill Dana Show on Sunday nights on NBC-TV.

Connors had his chance in the second episode to be cleared of charges he was yellow but he muffed it. However, if he had been proven innocent there would have been no television series.

As it is, we'll watch him get into and out of scrapes week in and week out proving that Jason McCord (Connors) is a man of courage, kindness, wisdom, pity and understanding.

If you think there is a similarity between the David Janssen series, "Fugitive," and this one you're wrong. Janssen is accused of having murdered only one person, his wife. Connors is accused of having done away, not with just one person but an entire U.S. cavalry regiment.

"Branded" may be around for quite a while. Connors' name is strong enough to carry the show. The rest will depend entirely upon story quality.

Stephen

RENTAL FRAY*Duncan Files
Search Barred,
Action Hinted

DUNCAN—A city lawyer today hinted "further action" if Duncan council refuses to permit his examination of its records.

Fred Green declined to spell out his next course of action if he is refused access to the documents.

He was refused verbally Monday night and is waiting for written refusal.

Mr. Green is acting for Hugh Ellison of Ellison Excavating Ltd., who claims injustice in allocation of city snow clearance work.

This concern reached its peak during the recent heavy snows. Mr. Ellison was especially concerned that the immediate past chairman of the public works committee (Alderman James Saunders) was active in the equipment rental field.

Mr. Green said if he were allowed to see the documents he might be able to tell Mr. Ellison he was wrong in feeling aggrieved.

The mayor said council could not act against the advice of its solicitor Hugh Henderson of Victoria who said committee reports and disbursements should not be made available.

Mayor Dobson gave some support to the idea but Alderman Robert Mason raised objection.

He said: "We would be allocating public land for the private use of one per cent of the population. I can't see that we can do that."

Asking applicant Thomas Lines to make a written and more detailed application, the mayor said perhaps other groups might be permitted joint use of the squash court.

A wide program of street improvements in the city was outlined to the council.

Ald. Barney Cocks said the streets and finance committees were considering a schedule to complete a full streets drainage program; install curbs, gutters and sidewalks where necessary; complete the tarvin street program so all city streets will be properly paved; and plant ornamental trees on streets which are sufficiently wide and adaptable.

He said the committees were considering borrowing sufficient money by way of debentures to put this program into effect.

81st Year, No. 204

By Arthur Mayse

A Legislature refreshed by its weekend break opened with jollity and mirth on Monday, but by the time Attorney-General Bonner moved the 6 p.m. adjournment in the absence of Premier Bennett, the climate had cooled remarkably.

The premier quitted his big blue chair minutes after a clash with NDP Gordon Dowding, first member for Burnaby, who in as brisk a bit of opposition as we've witnessed so far this session, advanced with best fang foremost to slash at PGE operation and maintenance.

This assault coming hard after Mr. Dowding's prediction that government takeover of B.C. Telephone Company would be launched within a year, fetched Mr. Bennett to his feet with arm flying like a pump handle.

"You're part of the problem," he accused lawyer Dowding, "not of the solution." Then, half-turned to address Speaker William Murray, but with eyes cast heavenward to the press gallery: "We know what you're doing!"

"Inciting to unrest!" Education Minister Leslie Peterson supplied: a charge followed by a cross-floor hollering match punctuated by whacks of the Speaker's gavel.

Through this exchange, and most of his further few minutes in the House, Mr. Bennett assumed a familiar pose denoting disdainful unconcern... back turned on Mr. Dowding while he chatted amiably with Mr. Peterson.

A gauge of present towering Sorec strength was to be found in North Vancouver Liberal-Gordon Gibson's apparent inability to land a blow.

We who observe the deliberations of the House know Mr. Gibson as a shrewd, ruthless bull-of-the-woods who feints with a homespun jest or two, then plants a caustically studded-lugger's boot in the government belly.

Not so on Monday!

We were taken on a Gibsonian excursion to Barkerville, where a barkeep in a resurrected saloon affronted the ghosts of long-gone miners by decanting a glass of cola instead of the double rye Mr. Gibson had ordered.

We enjoyed a pleasant February phantasy of mass winter excursions by British Columbians to a province-sponsored Hawaiian resort, with government picking up the tab.

All this made zesty listening; but where was the punch of yester-year, the clangor we waited for?

It didn't come. Liberal Gibson lumbered on, while a smiling premier nodded encouragement, to a tame end.

This was no double rye but lukewarm cola. John Tisdale of Saanich struck harder against Sorec sins of omission and he's on the government side!

One suggestion which interested me particularly was that B.C. no longer look to Ottawa for protection of her salmon from Japanese deepsea fleets. Instead, Mr. Tisdale urged establishment of an effective provincial fisheries authority. As a windup observation, I think that if afternoon speeches aren't to be curtailed, the docket should be reduced by one. Monday's last slated debater, Charles MacSorley, SC for Burnaby, was forced to pop his remarks back in the warmer until today.

Dissident Leader Rejects Ultimatum

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuters) — Laotian military forces armed with machine-guns took up positions in the centre of Vientiane today as the leader of an attempted military coup refused to disperse his troops.

Col. Bouleut Sykosy, who led three companies of Laotian soldiers in an attempt to seize control of the capital Sunday night, today defied an ultimatum by Laotian military leaders to withdraw his troops from the city.

Bouleut maintained he could not withdraw his troops from the city until pressure from the military chiefs ceased.

Asked what he was going to do, he replied: "Nothing. Wait until the pressure is off."

WANTS GUARANTEE

Diplomatic sources said Bouleut wanted a guarantee of his own safety and that of his troops.

Before the ultimatum expired, troops outside the sport stadium where Bouleut has his headquarters manned heavy machine-guns.

Bouleut, whose troops were holding out at Wattay Airport, charged that Gen. Kouprasith Abhay, military commander of Vientiane, broke an agreement to allow the rebel forces to withdraw to the stadium headquarters.

The coup, which was regarded as being directed at the army rather than the government, was reported to have fizzled out 15 hours after it started Sunday.

Those taken into custody yesterday were charged with contempt of court for demonstrating outside the Dallas County courthouse while court was in session.

SIGNS ORDERS

Circuit Court Judge James Hare signed the orders under which the group was taken into custody.

About 30 demonstrators charged with contempt Monday were sentenced to five days at hard labor and handed $50 fines today by Judge Hare.

Those arrested today walked to the courthouse in small groups to avoid breaking the city's anti-parade law.

All those taken into custody were adults. They were loaded into yellow buses and were hauled away singing " freedom" songs.

About 500 students, who boycotted schools for the second consecutive day, were poised for more demonstrations.

King's comments from his jail cell were relayed by Rev. Andrew Young, one of his aides.

Mystery Shrouds Joining King Pre-Summit Meet In Selma Jail

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Conservative national president Dalton K. Camp met today with opposition leader John Diefenbaker to discuss the weekend meeting of the party leadership.

baker and his office staff that he had not been informed beforehand of Camp's decision to call the Saturday meeting at which the party leadership will be discussed.

Spokesmen said that Diefenbaker was far from pleased with the decision which he learned on his return Monday night from London.

The opposition leader himself made it clear he would face his critics head-on at the meeting. "I am a member of the executive," he said.

"I will naturally express my views."

The opposition leader refused to comment when asked if the Camp announcement could be considered a victory for Quebec Tory chieftain Leon Balcer and a defeat for Diefenbaker, as was being interpreted by some newspapers.

The real element of surprise in Camp's statement was the fact that it was made before Diefenbaker's return from London, and scheduled the meeting before the Tory caucus.

Judge René Thibierge set Feb. 9 as the date for preliminary hearings.

The five-count charge alleges that Gignac, a businessman friend of Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Rivard, perjured himself in testifying about a deposit of $60,000 made at a Montreal trust company June 25, 1964.

The Quebec members said that such a meeting must be held to decide on a leadership convention before the session resumes Feb. 16. If no convention date is set the 10 will meet again to assess their position.

CHEERED ON PROCESSION ROUTE

Queen Marks Ethiopia Liberation

ADDIS ABABA (Reuters) — Thousands of cheering Ethiopians lined the route today as Queen Elizabeth drove to a wreath-laying ceremony at the monument commemorating Ethiopia's liberation from the Italians in 1941.

The Queen, accompanied by Prince Philip, wore a peacock blue silk suit and a green and blue hat.

During the four-minute ceremony at the monument the royal couple stood with heads bowed as a military band played the Ethiopian and British national anthems.

After the ceremony the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh visited Trinity Cathedral and walked down the marble steps leading to the cathedral vault, where they placed a wreath on the tomb of Empress Menen. The empress, wife of Emperor Haile Selassie, died in February 1963.

Today's program for the royal visitors included a visit to a school, where the Queen accepted a painting by a 15-year-old boy depicting the British Royal Family.

The Queen and the Duke also visited the Princess Tsehai

Hospital where Ethiopian nurses are trained. They later visited the Haile Selassie University.

The heavy round of engagements today followed the royal couple's arrival in Addis Ababa Monday for an eight-day state visit in return for a visit to Britain by the Ethiopian emperor in October, 1954.

The emperor, who was

Britain's guest during the Italian occupation of his country, was at the airport to greet the Queen when she arrived from London.

Resplendent in navy blue uniform with gold braid and a hat plumed with lion's mane, he boarded the jetliner with the British ambassador.

When the Queen stepped out in a pink and white dress and hat and a canary yellow coat, there was a gasp of admiration from the crowd.

Two Ethiopian girls handed her a yellow bouquet. The emperor introduced members of the imperial family. A guard of honor saluted.

On the Queen's drive into the city thousands of cheering people lined the road five deep on both sides for five miles.

OTTAWA (CP) — W. R. Joyce, a Toronto actuary who is chairman of the social security committee of the Canadian Association of Actuaries, blasted the proposed Canada Pension Plan today with a warning that it could cause trouble in the years ahead.

Flood Fears Seem Ended For Oregon

By The Associated Press

Flood danger appears to have ended in Oregon with freezing temperatures stopping mountain snowmelt and clear skies reported over much of the state.

State and county officials today began the task of estimating damage in the second major flooding this winter.

Poorly Designed

Gov. Mark Hatfield said Jone

C. Hill, public utilities commis

estimating the damage. Hill did

ber floods.

The weather bureau forecasts continued cool temperatures for the state with clear skies in most areas. The combination of warm temperatures and heavy rain was blamed for last week's floods.

Transportation in the state was gradually being restored to near normal as railroads and highway crews worked around the clock.

TWO WASHOUTS

Union Pacific restored service Monday in eastern Oregon near Pendleton after 300 men, working since last Friday, made repairs at two washouts. Southern Pacific stopped for a time, was also back in service.

Highway crews were beginning work today clearing Oregon near Tillamook. The highway was in the path of the earth slide that dammed the Wilson River Sunday forcing 600 persons downstream to the sea to evacuate.

Most major highways in the state were open, although U.S. 101 on the coast was blocked by slides at several points.

Russia Tests New Rocket

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union announced today the successful completion of new multi-stage rocket tests which may affect this year's space launch program.

Tass News Agency said a new version of rocket carrier for space objects was launched in the Soviet Union and came down more than 13,000 kilometers (8,100 miles) away in the Pacific with a high degree of accuracy.

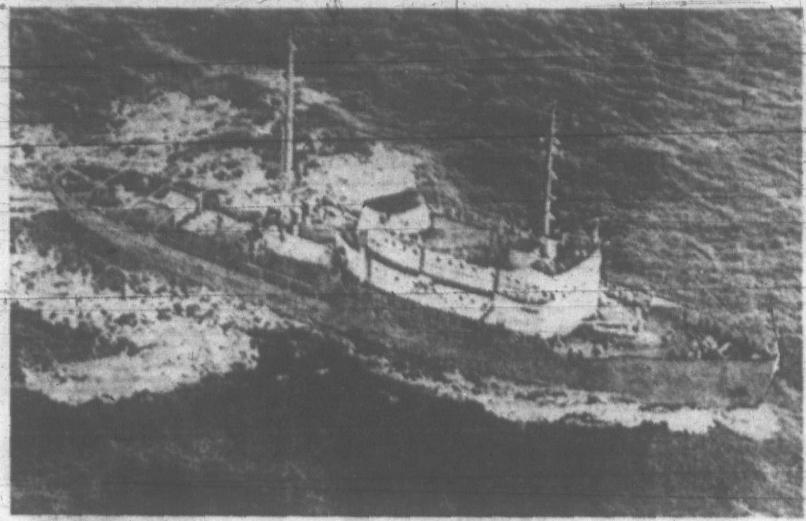

Guess the groundhog didn't come out. Didn't feel much like it m'self.

Striking Longshoremen Ignore LBJ's Plea to Return to Jobs

NEW YORK (AP) — Top officials of the striking longshoremen's union have declined to comply immediately with President Johnson's request that the men return to work in the ports from Maine to Texas where contract settlements have been reached.

Johnson, who relayed his request through Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz, also urged early settlements in the other ports.

Thomas W. Gleason at his side, later told reporters that union officials would make no decision on the White House request until it was certain that ILA locals in Baltimore and Philadelphia had accepted contract terms.

APPROVED CONTRACT

A short time later, word came that 4,000 ILA members in Baltimore had approved a four-year contract by a vote of 1,879 to 488. The contract is a revision of the one defeated last Wednesday 1,371 to 1,016.

For many years, the ILA has had a policy of not allowing its men to work in any port until locals, in all ports reached agreements.

In addition to Baltimore, the ports where the ILA has reached agreements with the shipping and stevedoring companies include New York, New Orleans, Boston, Norfolk, Va.; Baton Rouge, La., and Mobile, Alabama.

In addition to Philadelphia, the major unsettled areas are Galveston, Tex.; Miami, Fla., and Hampton Roads, Va.

RC Teachers Continue Walkout

QUEBEC (CP) — Fourteen suburban Roman Catholic school commissions hit by a teachers' walkout demanded today that the teachers end their "irregular" tactics and return to work immediately.

The demand came as some 550 teachers headed into their second day of "study sessions" which have closed schools in the surrounding district and left 15,000 French-speaking students on an unscheduled holiday.

The teachers called the "study sessions" — their way of getting around the fact they can't legally strike — in a bid to force their salary dispute with the commissions to a showdown.

The teachers claim a November arbitration board report, recommending their salaries be increased to parity with Quebec City levels, is binding on both sides and must be implemented. The commissions, on the other hand, are contesting the arbitration board findings in superior court.

A spokesman for the commissions said following a closed-door meeting Monday night that should the teachers refuse to return to their classrooms, the commissions reserve the right to take all steps open to them under the law. These steps were said to include cancellation of individual teaching contracts or general decertification of the teachers' syndicates.

DISCUSS REPORT

There was no immediate reaction from the teachers. But a spokesman said the "study sessions" would continue today to discuss the report of the Parent royal commission on education.

In Montreal, meanwhile, teachers involved in a similar dispute scheduled another meeting tonight to discuss the state of their negotiations. This group already has voted to call "study sessions" if necessary, but as yet has given no sign actually leaving the classrooms.

"More than 200,000 English and French-speaking students would be affected by a school shutdown in the Montreal area."

A spokesman for the Quebec suburban commissions said they feel the use of "study sessions" creates a false impression among the public by disguising an illegal act. These acts were prohibited by law, he said, and condemned by all.

TORONTO — Elmer Sophia (Liberal-Sudbury) said in the legislature Monday the CBC television late night news suffers in authenticity because its announcer also does toothpaste commercials on TV.

"I'm one of those who have looked with some disfavor on Earl Cameron selling toothpaste on the CBC," Mr. Sophia commented.

He said Mr. Cameron was required to tell lies about the particular brand of toothpaste, and this detracts from the authenticity of the 11 o'clock news."

(Times News Services)

BOSTON — Percy Tarpot is a race horse but he probably feels more like a sea horse.

The bay stallion, a three-year-old trotter, was hoisted aboard a British freighter at Sydney, Australia, last Dec. 2 for shipment to the United States.

The ship, the SS City of Brisbane, put in at several U.S. ports but Percy Tarpot could not be unloaded because of the longshoremen's strike.

A veterinarian boarded the ship at Norfolk, Va., and gave Percy blood tests. When the freighter arrived here Jan. 10, Percy was examined by U.S. agriculture department inspectors and veterinarians.

Percy remained shipbound because the port was strike-bound.

Then the freighter sailed for Halifax, N.S., to unload 800 tons of frozen meat. Percy made the trip. He had no choice. Two deck officers, Lawrence McCrory, 19, Belfast, Ireland, and Adrian Luckett, 19, of Norwich, Eng., were assigned the chore of wet nursing the horse halfway round the world.

"We'll be glad to see him go ashore for his own sake," said McCrory.

Percy eventually will get to his new home, Delvin Miller's Meadowland Farm, near Pittsburgh. But for the time being, at least, he is a horse without a country.

NEW YORK — Like any dutiful daughter, Linda Hope springs eternally to the defense of the globe-girdling golf-addicted father, Bob Hope.

But in true Hope tradition, she never lets sentiment stand in the way of quiet.

For instance: "He's now busy working on a TV show and trying to give time to his true profession, golf. He hates to let work interfere with golf, you know."

Not long ago, she accepted for her father a Foreign Press Association scroll for the best television comedy series, and said: "... I'm one of Dad's biggest fans — especially on TV. It's one of the few times I get to see him in the house ... This is one father a daughter can really look up to. He's always flying."

Tall and slim, with hazel eyes and short dark blonde hair she combs back severely, 25-year-old Linda looks like a lean-cut, well-scrubbed, tweedy English girl. She is the oldest of the four Hope children — all adopted when they were a few weeks old.

"If I had any trouble adjusting, I was too young to know," she said in an interview.

Life with father, she explains, is never dull.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Yale students have won a fight for daily visiting privileges for women.

Students now may have women visitors in their college rooms seven days a week instead of only on the weekends.

LONDON — Two performances scheduled by American pop singer P. J. Proby, whose pants split on stage again Sunday night, have been cancelled by his British promoters.

The curtain was lowered on Proby Sunday when his pants came apart at the seams during a performance in Luton, north of London.

Proby's pants popped Saturday night and the night before that during performances in South London.

He denied it was a stunt.

"Are you out of your mind? This incident could easily kill my career."

Proby's manager said a chain of movie theaters has decided to bar the performer and that various theatre owners were considering a similar move.

Proby suggested that henceforth his costumes be made of plastic.

Pathologist Testifies At Non-Capital Trial

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A pathologist testified Monday the bullets that killed three Surrey youths as they camped beside lake north of Mission were fired with the rifle muzzle in contact with their heads.

Dr. J. C. Coady, testifying at the non-capital murder trial of Dalton Grey, 24, of Surrey, said the remainder of the shots were fired from a distance.

Grey is charged with the murder of Donald Kehler, 19, Kehler and his companions, Rodney Wren, 19, and Tony Webster, 18, were found dead last July. Each had been shot numerous times in the head.

NINE BULLETS

Dr. Coady said Kehler had nine bullet wounds in the head and neck. Some of the bullets were fired with the rifle in contact or within inches of his head. The others were fired at a distance of over three feet.

He said three of the five bullets found in Webster's body had been fired with the rifle touching the head.

RALLIED CAUCUS

At that time, Diefenbaker eloquently backed by Alvin Hamilton and Senator Gratian O'Leary, rallied the caucus enthusiastically to squelch the attempted palace revolt led by Trade Minister Georges Hees.

Although several Tory members, other than the Quebec Group, have now spoken out for a leadership convention, it is generally agreed that Diefenbaker has the majority of his members behind him, particularly those from the west.

It was felt that if Camp failed to call a meeting before the parliamentary caucus the rebel Tories would be headed off at the pass.

Now that the meeting is slated for the weekend, Balcer and others will have their chance to judge what real support they have.

One source suggested that a final attempt might be made on the weekend to gather a select committee of the executive together to try to persuade Diefenbaker he should resign, and thus avoid an open and bitter confrontation.

Whatever the results, Camp himself has not publicly written off Diefenbaker as the man for the job at this time.

On a weekend television program he said he "wouldn't bet against" a Diefenbaker win if an election were called tomorrow.

ANNUAL CHALLENGE

The weekend showdown is taking place on the characteristics of an annual challenge to the Tory leader.

In the first week of February, 1963, Douglas Harkness resigned as defence minister in the Diefenbaker cabinet, the government was defeated, an election was called, and Hees and Pierre Sevigny resigned their portfolios following a party caucus.

Hartono said last November that Indonesia would explode an atomic bomb in 1965 and that it had begun surveying the possibility of producing intercontinental ballistic missiles. His statements last year came shortly after a reported successful launching of Indonesian-made rockets for artillery and infantry use.

Indonesia has an atomic reactor in Bandung, West Java, which was obtained from the United States. Another reactor is under construction with Soviet aid at Serpong, 44 miles southwest of Jakarta. Both reactors were said to be for peaceful purposes.

There was no immediate reaction from the teachers. But a spokesman said the "study sessions" would continue today to discuss the report of the Parent royal commission on education.

Congo Election Dates Announced

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP) — Congolese national elections will be held from March 18 to April 3, the government announced today.

A government communiqué said voting would take place at intervals in the six weeks period in the various provinces to allow electoral commissions to visit the localities.

UNION FUNDS TO BE PROBED BY SENATORS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Senate investigation subcommittee said today it is looking into huge union welfare pension funds which rarely pay any benefits and the suspected role of racketeers in the failure of some federally-insured banks.

Its plans for hearings on these and other matters were disclosed in a letter from chairman John L. McClellan (Dem., Ark.) to the Senate rules committee asking approval of a $435,000 budget for the year ahead.

The letter said staff investigators were checking into a number of labor union welfare-pension funds whose wage-earning employees members "rarely receive any benefits or annuities" but whose administrators do profit.

'NATIONAL UNITY, INDEPENDENCE AND ECONOMIC SELF RULE'

NDP Leader States 'Articles of Faith'

By JIM HUME

Tommy Douglas bounced into Victoria Monday with a gleam in his eye, the scent of an election in his nostrils and a new creed for Canadians.

The national leader of the New Democratic Party has already forecast a general election in June.

When he addressed 250 members of the Victoria Men's Canadian Club at the Empress Hotel he left no doubt that he was ready for the fray.

Mr. Douglas did not give a political address. But following the meeting he admitted that the next election would probably be fought on the issues he mentioned.

Stressed National Unity

National unity, Canada's independence from the United States and the return of economic power to Canadians, were the three points he stressed.

Premier Bennett Makes Tommy Douglas Welcome

Premier Bennett led the desk-thumping applause Monday when national leader of the NDP party, T. C. Douglas, sat as a guest in the B.C. Legislature.

Mr. Bennett then rose and welcomed Mr. Douglas to the legislature and later walked across the floor to chat with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas while they sat behind the NDP benches.

NDP MEMBER CLAIMS

Bennett Eyeing B.C. Telephone

The provincial government is planning to take over B.C. Telephone Company "within the year," Gordon Dowding (NDP-Burnaby) said Monday in the legislature.

He said the government backbenchers did not know that the B.C. Electric was to be taken over "and they don't know this government is projecting this takeover within the year," he said.

"I have pretty good sources for that information and the premier knows it," Mr. Dowding said.

He would not divulge his sources but outside of the legislature he told reporters it came from someone close to "the eminence behind this government—the man who controls its thinking."

Asked if he meant premier's financial braintrust Einar Gunderson, Mr. Dowding said he would not say anymore than he had.

TWO METHODS

He also said there were two ways in which the provincial government could take control of the company despite its federal charter.

It could try to buy up the common stock of the company—currently evaluated at about $153 million—or it could expropriate the physical plant of the company and pay compensation. The assets currently are evaluated at $305 million, "only half of that of the B.C. Electric," Mr. Dowding said.

In the house he said that the company, a subsidiary of General Telephone and Electric Corporation of New York, had made a profit of more than $85 million in the past decade in B.C. while charging rates almost double those of government telephone agencies in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

TAKING CREDIT

Mr. Dowding also said Premier Bennett was improperly being given credit for the Peace River project takeover and its development as a publicly owned power scheme.

The late (A. E.) Dal Grauer (president of B.C. Electric) saved the Peace River for public low-cost power by refusing to put it into private hands.

"Diversity can be troublesome," he said. "Trying to build (on it) can be difficult. But if we succeed we will build a rich heritage and make a contribution to world culture much better than the melting-pot."

Mr. Douglas said he had no illusions about the difficulties facing Canada in the future.

"Diversity can be troublesome," he said. "Trying to build (on it) can be difficult. But if we succeed we will build a rich heritage and make a contribution to world culture much better than the melting-pot."

Mr. Douglas said he disagreed with those who felt that the only future Canada had was in amalgamation with the United States.

"They have many things to be admired in the United States," he told the intent audience. "But so have we. A system of democratic government with great flexibility where any citizen, regardless of color or creed can seek public office; a concept of justice and freedom from Britain and France well-worth preserving. We have never had a McCarthy era in Canada . . . it is impossible and always will be while we have freedom . . . of press and pulpit."

Canada's independence in foreign affairs enabled the Dominion to make a greater contribution on the world scene that could be made if "we were part of the United States" Mr. Douglas said.

We Thought Cuba Trade Right

"We have traded with Cuba and with Red China, not just to make money, but because we thought it was right to do so," he stated, and went on to say: "It has been a good thing for the United States to have us so."

Mr. Douglas said it was also a good thing for the United States to "have a friendly neighbor, but not a subservient neighbor. A helpful neighbor, but not a satellite."

On more tangible issues the leader of the NDP claimed that it was an illusion held by many that union with the United States would bring instant prosperity.

"There is an illusion that if we joined the U.S., all of us would be rich and all our cities would suddenly become like New York," he said.

"We should remember that the United States already has a vast industrial heartland," he reminded the listeners. "And that the U.S. has never believed in a planned economy."

"Look at Dakota and the southern states . . . their main function is to supply men and materials to the great heartland. (In those states) we see declining manpower and declining resources . . ."

"If we joined the United States they would not rush in to Canada to build great factories, they already have their industrial complex. We would become just suppliers of raw materials."

PETITION ASKS SALES TAX EXEMPTIONS

A petition of almost 10,000 signatures asking sales tax exemptions to student clothing and certain household items was tabled in the legislature Monday by Mrs. Lois Hagen (NDP—Grand Forks-Greenwood).

She said in her argument that the present size limits on children's clothing exemptions were unrealistic and a hardship to larger families.

Purify Our Sewage Urges Saanich MLA

Wider use of sewage treatment plants for residential subdivisions was strongly urged in the legislature Monday by John Tisdale (SC-Saanich).

Mr. Tisdale said the government should investigate successes with a fully-enclosed system used in some places such as the Arctic in which domestic water is purified and re-used many times.

Mr. Tisdale also said the official ban on discharge of treated effluent from more common sewage treatment plants into streams such as Colquitz Creek should be reviewed.

"I noticed (last summer) that the whole of Colquitz Creek had been turned into a slimy green mess and it smells pretty strong."

FLUSH CREEK

Mr. Tisdale said discharging treated effluent "would at least help to flush (Colquitz Creek) out."

Mr. Tisdale criticized the provincial highways department for failing to start re-construction of the north end of Patricia Bay Highway immediately while awaiting results of a traffic survey.

He said the traffic problems created "on this one-way street with two lanes" resulted from the government ferry service so the government should widen it to four lanes.

The provincial government has created these problems and it should be prepared to move

For good measure he recited his new "articles of faith" for Canadians composed in a "few spare minutes" last Saturday in his Burnaby home.

"I believe in Canada."

"I have faith in its future and am dedicated to its destiny."

"I believe that this country has the potential for greatness, not only in material terms, but also in the things of the mind and spirit."

"I believe that the ingenuity of our minds and the labor of our hands applied to our vast resources can give Canada a standard of living and a quality of life far beyond our fondest dreams."

"I believe that the only thing we need to doubt is doubt itself. With faith in ourselves and a sense of national purpose we can unite all Canadians—labor and industry, farmer and city dweller, Catholic and Protestant, Gentile and Jew, French speaking and English—in a great crusade to make Canada a land where the good things of life will be enjoyed by all."

Sing O Canada With Pride

"I believe that a prosperous Canada can be a mighty force for peace in a troubled world. We seek no military conquest or territorial aggrandizement. Instead we shall use the many gifts Providence has bestowed to help nations less fortunate than ourselves and to wage constant war against poverty, ignorance and disease the world around."

"I believe that if we accept this article of faith and put it into practice, the day will surely come when our children and our children's children will sing with pride 'O Canada, . . . with glowing hearts we see thee rise the true north, strong and free . . .'"

Mr. Douglas recited his new creed for Canadians at the end of a 30-minute speech devoted entirely to the theme of national unity and the acceptance of French and British cultures.

"Canada was born in defiance of geography and economics," Mr. Douglas said. "We built a nation against all the laws."

Mr. Douglas stressed that the early nation of Canada was formed when the Empire Loyalists fled from the United States and settled in Upper Canada.

"They quickly joined hands with the French-Canadians of lower Canada," he added. "At that time they had nothing else in common but a desire to retain their identity. It may be that a similar alliance will serve us again."

The Socialist leader said there was no doubt in his mind that "a nation so conceived could survive, retaining the traditions and culture and background of the British and French instead of being absorbed in the melting-pot process."

We Have Many Assets to Offer

"We have many intangible assets to offer," he said. "The contributions of bilingualism and biculturalism are distinctive. There may be something to be said for the melting pot which destroys old cultures and places everyone in a common mould."

"But there is also something to be said for keeping the cultures we have," he added. "We shall be richer for the diversification."

Mr. Douglas said he had no illusions about the difficulties facing Canada in the future.

"Diversity can be troublesome," he said. "Trying to build (on it) can be difficult. But if we succeed we will build a rich heritage and make a contribution to world culture much better than the melting-pot."

Mr. Douglas said he disagreed with those who felt that the only future Canada had was in amalgamation with the United States.

Rotary Scheme Given the Nod By Foresters

The provincial forestry department may donate hundreds of trees for beautification of Patricia Bay Highway as a service club project.

Government officials have indicated interest in the project proposed by the Victoria Rotary Club.

Once the route of the new four-lane highway is disclosed, the club has suggested the highway department section off the 20-mile distance into 40 segments.

Beautification of each segment would be undertaken by individual service clubs and other community groups, involving planting of trees and maintaining a lawn.

mobile industry at Windsor when just across the river are the great factories of Detroit able to supply all the needs of the nation?"

Mr. Douglas said that already Canada shipped too many raw materials to the United States when "we should be shipping out processed products."

"The real future of Canada does not lie in becoming a periphery state with maybe 10 or 12 seats in Congress," he said. "Our future lies in developing our own industries and manufacturing our own goods."

Greater Exchange of Goods

Stressing that he was not advocating isolationism, Mr. Douglas said: "On the contrary I am advocating a greater exchange of goods. The real test is the crisis of power. We must keep the right to make our own economic decisions, to develop our new resources, to develop new products made in Canada by Canadians."

Mr. Douglas said he accepted and recognized the targets set for Canada in the recent study made by the Canadian Economic Council.

- The creation of 1,500,000 new jobs for Canadians.

- An increase of 5½ per cent in the gross national product.

- The reduction of the ranks of the unemployed to 3 per cent of the labor force.

He said he was confident that these objectives could be reached if Canadians "had faith" in the future of their country and "dedicated their lives to its destiny."

B.C. MEDICARE 'BOGUS, PHONY'

Douglas Denounces Bennett Plan

Alberta and Ontario have already been sold a bill of goods on their medicare schemes and British Columbia is ready to swallow the same line.

Tommy Douglas, national leader of the NDP, told 400 people at a special banquet Monday night that "these beggar-bowl schemes are just designed to stop comprehensive medicare."

Between standing ovations the slightly hoarse Socialist leader said he was disgusted with the suggestion that "these insurance-company-controlled medical plans were the first step towards comprehensive medicare."

"If they were first steps I wouldn't mind," he said. "But if they are indeed first steps they would be granting free medical care to the aged and to children under six. But they are not first steps. They are bogus, phony plans designed to forestall comprehensive medicare so that we will never get the real thing."

TWO-YEAR FIGHT

Warning to his subject he stated that the insurance companies had fought for two years to prevent the Canadian pension plan.

It would appear that they have now lost that battle," he said. "But they have now turned to more subtle ways to stop comprehensive, government-run medical care plans."

ALBERTA PLAN

Mr. Douglas noted that the Hall Commission on medical services had condemned the Alberta-medical-plan as degrading and humiliating.

"Just a few days ago in a speech at Winnipeg Mr. Justice Hall said rather significantly that the people who recommend a means test (before medical benefits can be received) are those who will likely never have to take one," Mr. Douglas said.

The NDP leader, first elected to the House of Commons 30 years ago next October, pledged that his party would fight to get medicare legislation approved as soon as the House resumes its sitting Feb. 16.

He also promised to continue to press for action in Ottawa until the government did something about solving the crisis being brought about by automation.

"Already automation is displacing 4,000 workers a month in this country," he said. "We have to give serious study to the problem and find a solution."

PEACEFUL MARCH to the legislature was staged this morning by more than 100 members of the anti-nuclear B.C. Peace Council. The delegation buttonholed as many MLAs as it could find and was to meet New Democratic Party members. Two plainclothes RCMP men accompanied them.

RCMP WATCH AS MLAs BUTTONHOLED

Hunting Good for Peace Council Bid

The legislative chamber, corridors and committee rooms were alive with people this morning in sharp contrast to their usual emptiness before afternoon sittings of the House.

More than 100 members of the B.C. Peace Council spread through the corridors in search of MLAs to urge them to take a stand against nuclear weapons in Canada and for total disarmament.

Their hunting was good because it was the first morning of work for the members so far this session as organizational meetings of eight committees were held in rapid-fire order in the two committee rooms. Meanwhile, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan held forth from the speaker's chair in the legislative chamber itself most of the morning as he gave a talk on the Legislative Buildings and the legislators to more than 30 high school students from his constituency who sat in the members' chairs.

The peace council group arrived quietly and was identified with lapel ribbons. Two plain clothes RCMP officers kept watch on them as they fanned through the corridors to buttonhole the politicians.

A delegation from the peace council group led by Dr. James Endicott, Toronto — here on a cross-country speaking tour — was to meet with the NDP caucus at 1:30 p.m.

Mr. Endicott said that B.C. shipyards should be trying for contracts to build tugs, barges and ships for Communist China. He said a major market exists for ship construction that will fall into Japan's lap by default unless Canadian yards bid for the work.

Basically, the adjustment was as we had requested," commented A. R. Kemp, assistant general secretary of the association.

TIME-AND-A-HALF

The 8,000-member group had requested an eight-hour day, a five-day week and the same overtime provisions as apply to other ferry crews.

The overtime provision, agreed to by B.C. Ferries for the Queen of Sidney, gives time and a half in pay for everything over 40 hours a week.

Mr. Kemp said the ferry will run in the same way as extra ferries on other runs — a nucleus of officers and men will be transferred from another vessel and temporary help hired to round out the compliment.

Ferry general manager Monty Aldous said the change was a reconsideration of scheduling.

"It was simply a management decision," he commented.

MUNICIPAL BOYCOTT BUT . . .

Hearing Is On Deputy States

A public inquiry into the proposed merger of a portion of View Royal with Esquimalt will continue tonight despite a municipal council boycott.

Inquiry chairman J. Everett Brown, deputy minister of municipal affairs, said today the hearing will be held as scheduled at 7:30 p.m. in View Royal Community Hall.

The inquiry will be adjourned to some later date after a few people have been heard," he said.

Mr. Brown's decision follows an Esquimalt council order Monday night prohibiting key municipal officials from attending meeting.

The officials had been asked to help clear up wranglings over the proposed merger of Esquimalt and View Royal panhandle.

CHAIRMAN CRITICIZED

The boycott was ordered after a heated discussion in which the inquiry chairman was criticized for his handling of the first meeting last Wednesday.

Municipal engineer John Graeme claimed the meeting was not properly controlled.

The inquiry is to determine where the boundary should be when the proposed merger takes place. Mr. Brown had asked municipal officials to attend tonight to answer questions.

Mr. Graeme told council he would not attend unless he was ordered.

He said: "I shan't be there tomorrow night if the meeting is going to be conducted in the same way."

"I'm not going to sit there and be abused . . . I've no objection to appearing before a public hearing and answering decent questions which are phrased decently."

"But there's no reason why we should be put through this sort of routine."

'NOT OUR FAULT'

Backing him up, Reeve Wurtzel said: "This is none of our doing. We were asked by the people (in the panhandle) if they could come in. We helped them with the petition. They set the boundaries."

One of the three commissioners, Coun. George Argyle said he didn't think the people at the meeting should be denied answers to their questions.

In answer to the complaints, Mr. Brown said he thought the hearing had been "generally orderly."

Rocky Islands Proposed For Parks

Five small, rocky islands in Victoria Harbor will be recommended as permanent parks, city council parks committee agreed today.

They are the three tiny Coffin Islands and larger Colville Island at the end of Roberts Street, Victoria West, and Halcott Island in Seikirk Water, near the CNR trestle.

Only Halcott Island has undergone with one or two stunted trees.

The move by parks committee, made at the recommendation of parks superintendent Herbert Warren after a private developer's suggestion, was to forestall any possibility of commercial use.

The following year, as part of Canadian Confederation centennial celebrations, a federally-sponsored military tattoo could also appear here, the mayor said.

"We just have to have this park by 1967," Ald. Geoffrey Edgerton said.

This is now beyond the city's means, but the possibility of having Royal Athletic Park area designated as an urban renewal project would mean the federal government pays most of restoration costs.

Vancouver Pacific National Exhibition has suggested a joint appearance on the west coast for the musical ride.

Grandstand Given Spurs

Possibility of having the RCMP musical ride appear here next year is spurring action to replace burned-out Royal Athletic Park stands.

This and other possibilities prove the need for dealing with Athletic Park "as soon as possible," Mayor R. B. Wilson said in parks committee meeting today.

72-Hour-Week Ferry Plan Gets Discard

Schedule Protest Gets Results

By ROGER STONEBANKS

B.C. Ferries has dropped plans to work a ferry crew 72 hours a week for three months this summer with only one day a week off.

Instead, the crew on the Queen of Sidney will work an eight-hour day six days a week and the service will be canceled outside the tourist season.

START IN JUNE

The ferry will start a new service this June from Swartz Bay through the Gulf Islands to Tsawwassen and back.

The original schedule, posted last November, was for a full year's operation. Outside summer months, the work week was often only two days.

The B.C. Government Employees' Association protested the original schedule as reminiscent of early Industrial Revolution conditions.

"Basically, the adjustment was as we had requested," commented A. R. Kemp, assistant general secretary of the association.

TIME-AND-A-HALF

The 8,000-member group had requested an eight-hour day, a five-day week and the same overtime provisions as apply to other ferry crews.

NEAR VICTORY

It was also the committee where the NDP strategy came closest to winning.

David Stupich (NDP-Nanaimo Islands) was nominated in opposition to W. F. Jeafcoat (SC-Salmon Arm) as chairman of the committee — a rare event. But he lost out on a 6-3 ballot.

Mr. Stupich, recalling that the committee has not done any business for years, proposed that it ask the house to instruct it to hear representatives of the Farmers' Institute of B.C. as it had done traditionally some time ago.

Jacob Huhn (SC-North Peace River) surprised everyone by agreeing with the NDP and tying the vote at 44 on the motion.

Chairman Jeafcoat himself wavered for several minutes as the two sides vied for his tie-breaking vote. He finally voted against the Stupich motion.

(After insisting he personally wished to see hearings held by the committee this year) on the grounds that it violated the procedural rules.

Similar attempts were turned back in the other committees where they were launched by NDP members.

However, the forestry and fisheries committee, which elected C. M. Shelford (SC-Omineca) as chairman, was told it definitely would hold hearings

Sought to Activate Five House Groups

Times Legislative Reporter

PRIVATE BILLS

No battles erupted up in it or the standing orders and private bills committee or the public accounts committee.

In unpreceded moves, various NDP members submitted motions that the chairman of the agriculture, social welfare, education, municipal matters, mining and railways, and labor committees ask the legislature for instructions to consider a variety of matters within their purview.
